FOREWORD

TO the person who does not have first-hand contacts with the religious life of America, its diversities and its organization into a great number of separate bodies seem most confusing. The Federal Census of 1926 records no fewer than 212 "religious bodies" of a national character. This statement gives a rather exaggerated impression of the divided character of American religious life, since most of the 212 bodies are small and more than ninety-five per cent of the church membership of the country is gathered within the folds of thirty-five denominational bodies. It is true, however, that it is not easy to gain a comprehensive picture of the total religious life of the country. Every important religious body issues its own yearbook or other manual of information about its own group, but, apart from the yearbooks which have from time to time been prepared and issued under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, there has been no attempt to present detailed information about all the churches within the covers of a single volume.

While the issuing of such a yearbook covering Protestantism as a whole, and also giving supplementary information concerning the other major divisions of American religious life, is only a single and somewhat incidental illustration of the work of the Federal Council, it is a convincing evidence of the indispensable necessity of the place of the Council in the Christian life of the nation.

The present edition of the Yearbook of American Churches goes beyond its predecessors in the range of its interest and the effectiveness of its interpretations. A noteworthy feature is the series of charts and diagrams which visualize the historical background and relationships between different religious groups. In several cases the most complicated relationships have been presented to the eye in a manner which makes for clarity and understanding in a remarkable degree.

If the Yearbook of American Churches serves to make the total service of the religious bodies of the nation more vitally known and more clearly understood, it will have fulfilled the important purpose for which it is designed.

ALBERT W. BEAVEN, President
Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America

CYCLE OF UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

THE Improved Uniform Lessons for 1932-36 constitute a five-year cycle. Four important and interesting topical courses are offered: "Studies in the Christian Life," "Some Great Christian Teachings," "Christian Standards of Life," and "Some Representative Men and Women of the Bible." There are studies in each of the four Gospels: three months being given to John, six months to Mark, six months to Matthew, and six months to Luke. Besides, the course of three months on the "Life and Letters of Peter" furnishes a rapid survey of the Gospels. The Acts and the Epistles are studied three times, once in the three months on the "Life and Letters of Peter," once in the three months on the "Life and Letters of Paul," and again in the six months on "The Spread of Christianity," which includes the Revelation. It will be noted further that this cycle of studies is not allowed at any time to get far from the central theme of all our Bible study, the life of the world's Redeemer and its extension in the history of the early church. The five-year cycle is as follows:

January-March, 1932—The Message of the Gospel According to John.

April-June, 1932—Messages from Genesis.

July-September, 1932—The Era of Moses.

October-December, 1932—Christian Standards of Life.

January-June, 1933—The Gospel of the Son of God: Studies in Mark.

October-December, 1933—Life and Letters of Paul.

January-June, 1934—The Gospel of the Kingdom: Studies in Matthew.

July-September, 1934—The Early Prophets and Kings of Israel: From Ahijah to Isaiah.

October-December, 1934—Studies in the Christian Life.

April-June, 1935—Some Great Christian Teachings.

July-September, 1935—Some Representative Men and Women of the Bible.

October-December, 1935—Later Prophets and Leaders of Judah: From Isaiah to Malachi.

January-June, 1936—Jesus, the World's Savior: Studies in Luke.

July-December, 1936—The Spread of Christianity: Studies in the Acts, the Epistles, and the Revelation.

MISSION STUDY CYCLE

FOR 1932-33 the interdenominational materials for missionary education are on the general theme of "Christ and the Modern World."

The new books on foreign missions for adults, young people and intermediates will be published by the Missionary Education Movement on behalf of the eighteen denominations cooperating in its work. The book for women's groups will be published by the Central Committee on the United Study of Foreign Missions. For children the study will be "Africa."

In the field of home missions the Missionary Education Movement will publish jointly with the Council of Women for Home Missions a series of books for all grades dealing with those aspects of the general theme that bear particularly upon the present trends in American life and with the work of the American churches through their home mission agencies.

For 1933-34 the subjects of study to be offered are "Foreign Missions: Japan" and "Home Missions: Oriental Peoples in America."

BOOKS OF INTEREST IN THE JEWISH FIELD

HARRY SCHNEIDERMAN

Editor, the American Jewish Year Book

AMONG significant Jewish books published during the year were Introduction to the Talmud and Midrash, a translation by the late Prof. Max L. Margolis, of the standard work of Hermann L. Strack, the famous German Hebraist; this was brought out by the Jewish Publication Society of America, which issued also Legends of Palestine, a translation with additions and rearrangements, of the Hebrew work, Agudat Erez Yisrael by Zev Vilnay, which appeared in London in 1929. In November, 1931, Dr. Cyrus Adler, president of the Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, announced the publication of the first part of The Book of Joshua in Greek, by Prof. Max L. Margolis, who had spent twenty years on the work. Finding it impossible to secure an accurate text, Dr. Margolis had written one himself, a facsimile of it appearing in the book. The book was issued under the auspices of the Alexander Kohut Foundation.

Other significant publications were As a Jew Sees Jesus, by Rabbi Ernest A. Trattner; The Trial of Jesus of Nazareth, by Dr. Max Radin, professor of law at the University of California; Josephus on Jesus, by Dr. Solomon Zeitlin, professor in charge of the Rabbinical Department of the Dropsie College; The Jew and His Neighbor, a Christian study of anti-Semitism, by James Parkes; The Third Wall of Jerusalem, a description of archaeological excavations carried on in the vicinity of Jerusalem by the authors, E. L. Sukenik and L. A. Mayer; A Rabbi Takes Stock, by Rabbi Solomon Goldman; The Prophetic Poetry of Isaiah, by Dr. William Popper, professor of the department of Semitics at the University of California; and The Memoirs of Glueckel of Hamelin, a translation by Marvin Lowenthal of the famous German journals of a pious Jewish wife and mother of the second half of the seventeenth century.

(The selection of titles in these reading lists has been sharply limited by the space available. The exclusion of any book does not mean that it lacks importance. A few titles are starred to indicate that a person who is able to read no more than this number of books in the respective fields will find a relatively large amount of information in them. Supplementary reading lists will be furnished, on request, by the Federal Council's Department of Research and Education, 105 East 22d Street, New York, N. Y.)

Current Trends

TRENDS of thought of fundamental significance do not develop within a single twelvemonth. Further, in the reading of general tendencies, each man must fall back upon personal impression. But, to the present writer, it would seem that any impartial survey of religious thought in this country over the past several years would reveal at least four marked developments; each has been accentuated during 1932.

a. The most indisputable is the passing of non-theistic Humanism. In part this is due to a more acute examination of the premises of Humanism and the disclosure of their inadequacies. In part, it is attributable to positive support for theistic belief which has recently come from the most eminent men of science. In part it is a sign of the rapidly altered world in which we live—a world which no longer professes human self-sufficiency but cries out for a profounder apprehension of reality and a more ultimate anchorage for life's struggle. Humanism is increasingly regarded as the theological expression of the "jazz age," an age now deceased. Put very simply, we may say that the absorbing religious issue of the post-war period was, "Is there a God?"; there is every indication that the heat of interest in the coming years will center on the question, "What is God like?"

b. Closely parallel but less expected is the mounting distrust of liberal theology. If Humanism is dismissed as an ephemeral feature of the nineteen-twenties, much liberalism stands condemned as the characteristic theology of a romantic and ill-founded pre-war optimism. Its premises likewise are being subjected to devastating criticism. It is significant that those who stand somewhere between radicalism and traditionalism in theology are today as loath to be labeled "liberals" as they were to be called "modernists" some years since.

c. Another feature of the same general movement is a progressive resolution of the science-religion controversy. By no means do we suggest a final settlement of all the disputed issues; there is as yet no general agreement on the basic question—how far the specific sciences should be expected to contribute to religious truth. But we have passed beyond the day when theologians "cling to the skirts of an Eddington like scared children and forthwith grow very bold and outspoken." The religious affirmations of prominent scientists have speeded reconciliation. But far more influential have been developments within the life of the times which have driven thought far out beyond this age-old conflict.

d. The obverse of the three foregoing trends is confronted in the most arresting and baffling single characteristic of the contemporary religious mind—a renascent supernaturalism. The evidences of this are too numerous for citation, too clear for dispute. One thinks at once of the Theology of Crisis which commands a steadily increasing attention. But many who cannot understand this strange dialectic theology know that it is saying something which they have long dimly felt. Possibly it is less significant as a contribution to theology than as a weather-vane to winds of thought. The growing strength of Anglo-Catholicism (felt in America thus far only indirectly), the extraordinary power of the so-called Oxford Groups, the increasing attention to European theology other than Barthian—all these and, far more, movements within common life which are more readily felt than defined, seem to give a foretaste of what lies ahead. They presage radically altered perspectives and issues in American theology in 1933.

The "Conversation About God"

No chronicle of the year's theology could fail to mention the running debate on the theistic issue between three well-known thinkers which featured the pages of The Christian Century for a period of over seven months. The idea was a novel one. It is doubtful whether ever before in America so many persons have been reading and discussing the same religious material from week to week, at least during the early weeks of the debate. The discussion carried the title, "A Conversation About God." The protagonists were Professor Max Carl Otto of the University of Wisconsin defending vigorously the case of non-theistic humanism, Professor Henry Nelson Wieman of the University of Chicago presenting his distinctive and familiar view of God as "process" and "possibilities," and Professor Douglas Clyde Macintosh of Yale Divinity School proposing a Christian theism rooted in moral optimism. It is impossible to give a clear judgment on the significance of the experiment or the merit of the individual contributions. In a single issue one correspondent of The Christian Century pleads release from "the tedious twaddle of the long-drawn-out 'Conversation About God' that is almost driving many of your most liberal and open-minded readers to drink," while another, remarking that he has been reading the articles with "much interest and benefit," requests their publication in permanent form. The series of discussions was issued as a book, Is There a God? (Willett, Clark and Co., $2.50) at the close of the year.

"Religion in Life"

Of the permanent importance of another innovation in religious discussion which the year brought forth one may speak with greater assurance. Indeed it is probable that time will mark the launching of the new Christian quarterly, Religion in Life, as the most significant theological event of 1932. Under the direction of a distinguished interdenominational editorial board of which Dr. John W. Langdale is chairman, the magazine aims to present scholarly but readable treatments of the most vital Christian issues which are claiming attention from the professionally concerned and "that portion of the general public which is seriously interested in the current problems of religion and ethics." The first four numbers have maintained a high standard. With fewer reports of research and more articles directed to questions of immediate concern, and with brief book-notes rather than scholarly reviews, Religion in Life bids fair to take its place as complementary to and as valuable as its older fellow-quarterly, The Journal of Religion.

Literature

Generally speaking, the current literature in any field is a good guide to dominant trends and some measure of their vitality. It is, perhaps, symptomatic of the state of American theology in 1932 that the year has brought forth no single theological book of outstanding merit. From a list of a dozen or more titles, five may be selected for brief citation: Rufus M. Jones, A Preface to Christian Faith in a New Age (Macmillan, $2.00), an appraisal of the forces forming contemporary thought and a guide-post to a persuasive restatement of the Christian position, written with the collaboration of a dozen prominent advisers; Francis J. McConnell, Aids to Christian Belief (Abingdon, $1.00), in the author's characteristically clear, realistic and pungent style; Douglas C. Macintosh, A Pilgrimage of Faith (Calcutta University Press), lectures on the roots of religion prepared for Indian student audiences; Corliss Lamont, The Issues of Immortality (Holt, $1.50), an historical review of the two principal alternative positions leading the author to negative conclusions regarding personal survival, and Edgar Sheffield Brightman, Is God a Person? (Association Press, $1.25), another presentation of the new theism which Professor Brightman has been urging through two earlier books and numerous magazine articles and reviews in the past two years. But it can hardly be said that any of the foregoing makes a significant contribution to theological thought, nor is it likely that their influence will extend far beyond the year of their publication. Two works of theological exposition stand in quite different stead. Arthur Cushman McGiffert, Sr.'s, A History of Christian Thought, Vol. I, Early and Eastern (Scribners, $8.00), the first section of a projected three-volume work which has been long and eagerly awaited, promises to take its place as an indispensable source-book for many years to come. Special attention should also be drawn to Walter Lowrie's Our Concern with the Theology of Crisis (Meador, $2.00), the first convinced apologia for the dialectic theology from an American pen and one of the most helpful expositions of it now available in English. The closing days of the year saw the appearance of two further books which seemed destined to claim more than passing influence. Reinhold Niebuhr's Moral Man and Immoral Society (Scribners, $2.00), the author's first serious book in five years, defends the necessity for a social ethic quite different from that accepted as normative for personal life; it may well determine the focus of controversy in the ethical sphere for the coming period. Contemporary American Theology (Round Table, $3.00), a symposium of personal confessions of theological pilgrimage and conviction to which a dozen foremost American thinkers have contributed, is a work of first importance; at least one companion volume of similar credos is promised for later publication.

EVANGELISTIC TRENDS IN 1932

JESSE M. BADER

(The author is Field Secretary of the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council)

THERE is every reason to believe that the trend in 1932 has been toward a better and a more aggressive evangelism. This fact is confirmed by contacts with the field, reports, and statistics. This trend is recognizable in the midst of the opposing currents that have been running in our national economic and social life. The churches made numerical advances during the year, while at the same time they made drastic cuts in budgets, due to a decreased income. While money is necessary for the work of kingdom extension, yet the church has learned that there are many advances that can be made without it.

The Depression and Evangelism

The depression was worse in 1932 than during the previous year. There were more unemployment, longer breadlines, and lower wages. Along with every depression come financial losses, bewilderment, disillusionment, and fear. It is also true that a depression causes people to think seriously and discriminately as to the real values in life. It is the history of depressions that they are often followed by religious awakenings. It is difficult to get people to think about the Bread of Life and their need of it. When they possess what they believe to be "cake" in days of prosperity, many look upon prosperity as an evidence of divine approval. When a depression comes, moorings are swept out from under materialistic thinking and many begin to desire the reinforcement found in religious faith. If suffering and misfortune go deep enough this is what usually happens. At the close of 1932, there is no general religious awakening over the land, but there are sure indications of a hunger for God and a desire for righteousness. Here and there over the country there are signs of a turning to Christ in faith and contrition.

Signs of the Morning

Beyond a doubt there is evidence of an increase in the practice of personal devotions. The demand for devotional literature is growing. The radio broadcasting stations have thousands, even tens of thousands, listening in every morning to the devotional hour which they provide. Over 750,000 copies of the Fellowship of Prayer, a devotional booklet, were printed, distributed and used last year in the Lenten period. Sunday school and church attendance both show some increase. This is also true of the midweek services of the churches. In the judgment of many, the Lenten Period was more widely observed than ever before. Easter was unprecedented in interest and attendance on the part of multitudes. There were more Easter sunrise prayer meetings held and with larger numbers attending than in previous years. These Easter services have been held for a number of years. The novelty has worn off. Those who come do so in reverence, for worship, and to join in the commemoration of the greatest event in history. Some communities hold a union communion service. In Los Angeles, under the leadership of the Church Federation, four union communion services were observed in the city on Good Friday.

The letters that pour into the radio stations of the nation indicate unmistakably a quickened interest in religion. Ministers are saying almost universally that they are having more requests for personal interviews with reference to personal religion than since the war.

Unity in Evangelism

Last June at Northfield, Mass., the leaders of evangelism, representing about twenty-five Protestant communions, met for three days and worked out a united program. Each leader took the program, adapted it, and sent it out among the churches and pastors of his communion.

During the entire year, many united conferences on evangelism were held. The denominational secretaries visited a series of cities together in the South. In the autumn, nine one-day evangelistic conferences were held jointly by the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council, and the City Federations of Churches. Forty-five speakers from the various religious bodies were used on the programs. Over 1,350 ministers were reached, as well as many laymen.

A Growing Movement

For some time now there has been in existence in the country, particularly in the East, what is called "The First Century Christian Fellowship." It is known in England and in several other countries as the "Oxford Movement." An emphasis is made on confession of personal sins, sharing of a Christian experience, and witnessing for Christ. The meetings are usually held in hotels in the larger metropolitan centers. It does not claim to be an organization. The movement seems to be growing rapidly.

Evangelistic Methods Used

Few large union evangelistic meetings were held during the year in comparison with the number held a decade ago. The trend for the last ten years has been away from this method as a major method in soul winning. A few such meetings were held during the last year and with conspicuous results, but in the main the evangelistic spirit and passion are being expressed in other ways.

The membership of the churches is being increased through the Sunday schools. Those religious bodies that have had the largest increase in Sunday school attendance have had the largest number of new members added to the church. The Southern Baptists last year had an increase in their Sunday schools of 113,727, and a gross increase of 211,253 in church membership and a net gain of 94,288 in church membership.

Pastoral evangelism is on the increase. This last year was characterized by more direct evangelistic preaching than for some time. The denominations held many conferences on evangelism for pastors. The response was most gratifying. In Los Angeles County, under the Federation of Churches, 400 congregations added more than 10,000 new members in the pre-Easter and Pentecost periods.

Many evangelistic meetings were held in 1932. Most of these meetings were held by local churches in their own buildings with the pastor, or an evangelist, doing the preaching. The meetings were from one to four weeks in length. In some communities union evangelistic services were held with two or more churches going together with the pastors taking turns in doing the preaching; or, as in Baltimore, with an evangelist and his singer holding a series of union services by communities. There were large results. There seems to be a return to the evangelistic meeting as a most fruitful method in soul winning.

Conservation of Members

One religious body had a gross increase during the year of more than 100,000 and yet reported less than 10,000 net gain. Most of the communions could report a similar experience. Where is the difficulty? It is often largely in the inadequate follow-up plans the churches have for the conservation of those who move from one place to another. The greatest percentage of loss is at this point. Another reason is the indifferent way in which many church rolls are kept, and again because of poor shepherding on the local field. Another reason is because so many church members have been caught in the maelstrom of prosperity since the war and have had their spiritual senses dulled and their loyalty weakened. Two needs are apparent in evangelism—there needs to be a greater passion for winning larger numbers to Christ, and also a deeper conscience on the care and culture of those already in the church.

The Outstanding Evangelistic Events of the Year

Week of Penitence and Prayer, observed October 2-8 by twenty-six Protestant bodies. Over 137,000 copies of the prayer leaflet were printed and distributed.

The formulation and sending out of a Message to the Churches by the Federal Council from its Quadrennium held in Indianapolis, December 6-9.

The holding of a union Olympic Evangelistic Crusade during the Olympic Games this last summer at Los Angeles with Bishop Arthur J. Moore as the evangelist. These daily meetings with two services each day were attended by tens of thousands from all parts of the world.

A great number of denominational and interdenominational conferences, conventions, assemblies, and retreats held during the year over the nation in which the evangelistic motive and method were emphasized. There is a decided feeling on the part of church leaders everywhere that the church is getting back as never before to its primary and fundamental task—which is evangelism.

SOCIAL SERVICE IN 1932

BENSON Y. LANDIS

(The author is Associate Secretary of the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council; a contributor to Information Service and numerous other periodicals; a sociologist who has had many contacts with the social activities of the Protestant churches.)

THE economic crisis has overshadowed all of the activities of the churches in social service during 1932. It is not known whether the total amount of social service carried on by the churches is increasing, but there is every evidence that the relief activities of the churches—urban and rural—have been increasing. Likewise there is every evidence that many of the institutions of the churches—hospitals, homes, etc.—have been wrestling with the problem of how to meet increasing demands with reduced income. The absence of comprehensive statistics on Protestant social service has long been a handicap. The Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council began in 1932 a statistical study of church social work which will supply much needed data.

Relief Is Not Enough!

Everywhere the Protestant churches have assisted in unemployment relief, both directly and indirectly. The pulpit has been a major influence in arousing the people to organized action. Many churches are "caring for their own" and thus making a significant contribution to the community at large. Furthermore, the churches have promoted systematic study of such topics as the causes of unemployment and possible remedies; the characteristics of the economic crisis, of the whole economic system; the possibilities of economic planning. An illustration is the publication by the Association Press of a study course prepared by a special committee of the Federal Council's Department of Research and Education entitled Our Economic Life in the Light of Christian Ideals. There also appears to be a growing interest among the churches in the promotion of various forms of social insurance against the major risks of life—unemployment, sickness, accident, old age.

The New Social Ideals

Four years of thorough study and preparation culminated in the presentation by the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council to the Quadrennial Meeting of the Council, held at Indianapolis, Ind., December 6-9, of a new statement on social ideals. Never has a pronouncement of the churches been submitted to more careful scrutiny by a large number of persons. Special study groups were formed in some churches, and a wide variety of criticism was considered by the Commission. Much of the criticism may be divided into two groups: that from those who want a statement to be more conservative and that from those who want it to be more liberal. A representative statement must take into account the multifarious opinion held within Protestantism. The document as adopted at Indianapolis is published in full on page 319 of this book.

Institutions by the Hundred

The best-known form of social service of Protestant churches is that carried on through institutions. The Protestant churches actually support more than 340 hospitals or sanitarium, 310 homes for the aged and 400 institutions for children or child-placing agencies. An exact enumeration is impossible because of the variety of degree of control. About half of the homes for the aged operated by Protestant churches specify that they will take only applicants who are members of the denomination sponsoring the home, or at least will give preference to such applicants. The policies of most Protestant hospitals and institutions for children are just the reverse. The majority of the hospitals sponsored by Protestant churches are of the general type. Recent information from the American Medical Association indicates that church groups still play a large part in the organization and maintenance of hospitals and that new hospitals are more frequently under church than public control.

During the year, a special study made by the Commission on the Church and Social Service of retiring homes for competent people disclosed that there are thirty-five high class homes of this type for professional and business people. Not all are under religious auspices. But there are 27 states which do not have an institution of this type within their borders.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A. received a report from H. W. Hopkirk of the Child Welfare League in regard to eleven institutions for dependent children maintained by eight out of the forty-six synods in the church. These eleven institutions had an average of 72 children under care. Only about two-sevenths of the children were from Presbyterian families. Certain improvements were recommended by Mr. Hopkirk, including wider use of foster family homes. It was recommended that Presbyterian synods take the lead in community planning rather than start new homes or agencies of their own.

Church or Community Agencies

One of the moot questions faced by churchmen in days when a great amount of social service is called for is whether the churches should maintain or increase agencies of their own, or whether they should look increasingly to community agencies. It is evident that Protestantism is divided on this question. Some groups—for example, the Lutherans—favor inclusive church organizations for social work. Others seem to do no social work directly at all. There is some evidence that Protestantism is increasingly favoring community handling of social work but others well informed deny that this is the trend. The situation is too diverse for easy generalization.

Important Events

The annual meeting of the Church Conference of Social Work was held in connection with the National Conference of Social Work in Philadelphia in May. This is a forum for bringing the forces of the church and social work closer together. A special feature was consideration of relief measures. The problem of bringing about a rapprochement between the church and social work is a big one. Charities had their origins in religious bodies, as also did our educational institutions. Today, with the separation of social work from the church, many misunderstandings occur between the two forces. Yet the economic crisis is overwhelming to social work agencies, and they are looking increasingly to volunteers. The churches are supplying many of the volunteers needed. Both the Church Conference and the National Conference to be held at Detroit in June, 1933, will emphasize the functions of the volunteer in social work.

Professor L. Foster Wood of the Rochester-Colgate Theological Seminary assumed the secretaryship of the Committee on Marriage and the Home of the Federal Council and has begun the holding of systematic conferences on the relation of the churches to family life.

A world conference on the churches and unemployment was held at Basle, Switzerland, in April, 1932, and was attended by Rev. James Myers, Industrial Secretary of the Federal Council's Department of the Church and Social Service.

There appears to be a growing interest in mental hygiene and in the possibilities of relating the work of the churches to the new data and techniques being developed by the mental hygiene movement.

TRENDS IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN 1932

F. ERNEST JOHNSON

(The author is executive secretary of the Department of Research and Education, Federal Council of Churches, and Professor of Education in Teachers College, Columbia University)

CONCERN for adult education has grown steadily stronger during the year 1932. The economic crisis and the social maladjustments which have resulted from it have hastened realization of the necessity of helping adults gain an insight into the complexities of a changing civilization and equipping them to take part in social and religious reconstruction. A beginning has been made of exploring the possibilities of adult education through the churches by the creation of a committee of the faculty of Teachers College, Columbia University, to guide experimentation in this field in cooperation with church organizations. It is proposed to make some practical demonstrations in selected communities.

Perhaps it is due to the widespread feeling of insecurity that a demand has arisen for fundamental thinking and for more study of the content of religious education. There is relatively less zeal for discussion and more concern for conviction. This has expressed itself partly in a greater stress upon the study of the Bible and other phases of the religious heritage

Limitations of Religious Education

Another sign of the times has been a clearer realization of the limitations of religious education as ordinarily conceived. Faith in evolutionary changes brought about by the slow processes of education has been somewhat dimmed. In some quarters there has been a call for "social action"; religious education has taken on a more radical bent, assuming the function of arousing discontent with the unethical aspects of the existing order. A more realistic approach to life is demanded.

At the same time there is under way a re-examination of the professional status of religious education. The economic stress hastened a process already begun of combining the educational with the pastoral functions and frequently eliminating the director of religious education. Many leaders in the field have expressed uncertainty concerning the future of professional leadership in religious education. At the same time there was never a clearer sense of the need for trained leadership in this field.

Research and Publication

Several studies involving research over a period of years have been published in 1932. Certain portions of the International Curriculum Guide have been issued by the International Council of Religious Education: Book I, outlining the principles and objectives of Christian education and describing the total curriculum project; Book II, The Christian Education of Chil- dren; and Book III, The Christian Education of Youth. These materials represent a radically different policy from that originally proposed in 1922. They are prepared on the principle that "the work of the International Council in the curriculum field is not primarily that of producing materials for use in local churches but that of developing principles and procedures by which to guide the many curriculum-making enterprises now under way." Books II and III deal with the analysis of experiences at various age levels; statements of desired outcomes; suggestions regarding method, procedures, organization and administration, and leadership requirements; and sample units of guided experience.

Another recent publication of the International Council, 1932, is a service bulletin, A Manual for County and Local Councils of Religious Education, giving detailed suggestions for the development of a cooperative program.

One of the most extensive research studies in religious education ever undertaken has been carried on under the direction of Prof. Hugh Hartshorne of Yale University, acting under a grant from the Institute of Social and Religious Research to investigate the status and trends of Protestant religious education. Two volumes of this study were published in 1932: Community Organization in Religious Education, Hartshorne and Miller, and Case Studies of Present Day Religious Teaching, Hartshorne and Lotz. The first study is based upon an investigation of thirteen cooperative agencies in eleven communities, followed by an intensive survey of New Haven in order to determine a functional approach to determining the structure and program of cooperation in religious education. The second volume presents an analysis of classroom teaching, based upon observation in 150 class sessions, and gives several case studies in detail illustrating the procedures and also the difficulties of creative religious teaching.

A publication of significance for religious educators was the 10th Yearbook of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association, dealing with "Character Education." This report represents a very definite trend toward regarding character education as an integral part of all good education, and toward thinking of character in terms of social relationships rather than individual virtues.

Two other noteworthy books appeared in 1932 which illustrate the same tendency to approach character from the standpoint of social functioning: Character in Human Relations by Hugh Hartshorne and Educating for Citizenship by George A. Coe.

Organization Emphases

The Religious Education Association placed special emphasis in 1932 on the relation between crime and education. The theme of the 29th Annual Convention was "Implications for Character-Religious Agencies of the Findings of the Wickersham Commission Studies and Similar Investigations." Particular attention was given to the problem of the development of moral and religious sanctions adequate for a changing society.

The promotional emphasis of the International Council of Religious Education for the year 1982-1983 is "Increase," which is interpreted in terms not only of attendance but of the working capacity of church schools. The service bulletin which has been issued in this connection stresses the importance of adequate records and an effective educational program, as contrasted with earlier emphases on prizes and contests.

The youth agencies of the Protestant churches of North America have been stressing a nation-wide consideration of the economic problem. Several new units for use in young people's groups were printed in the fall of 1982: "Why Are There Rich and Poor?" "Poverty and Wealth," "What Can We Do About the Depression?"

Inter-Faith Education

The National Conference of Jews and Christians made a significant demonstration in the field of inter-faith education among adults at its conference in Washington in March, 1982. Catholics, Protestants and Jews united in frank discussion of common interests and different viewpoints. Problems of religious liberty and of intergroup relations were studied by means of discussion group and "U-Table" techniques (see page 48).

THE CHURCH AND RURAL LIFE

BENSON Y. LANDIS

(The author is secretary of the Rural Committee of the Federal Council's Department of Research and Education; secretary of the joint Committee on Town and Country of the Home Missions Council and the Federal Council; executive secretary of the American Country Life Association)

The Stampede from the City

AFTER declining steadily for twenty years the farm population has been gaining again during the years 1980-82. The annual estimates made by the Department of Agriculture of the farm population indicate that during 1982 it was as large as in 1910, which was the peak for the number of people living on the land in the United States.

The movement has been called a stampede to the land; also a stampede from the cities. After tramping the streets looking for work which does not exist, or sampling the relief offered by the city, thousands are fleeing with mingled hope and despair to the countryside. There they hope to raise their own food, use their old clothing and have inexpensive shelter. People are going back to the land in family groups. Many of them are moving in with their relatives. Many are going on poor land. Abandoned farm houses are once more being occupied.

This shift of population for a refuge in the country cannot be very accurately appraised at this writing.

It may only transfer some of the relief burden from the cities—where most of the wealth of the United States is concentrated—to the county governments which have fewer resources. It may only result in a larger number of people living in rural slums than have been living in city slums. On the other hand, it may mean a significant distribution of the population. More people may be going to live on the land permanently. It will all depend upon the extent to which the cities will absorb labor.

Country Ministers Go to School

In the spring and summer of 1932, as during previous years, more than 1,000 ministers in town and country churches attended special schools held at theological seminaries and state colleges of agriculture. The main purposes of these schools, which are interdenominational, are:

"To assist pastors in acquiring new insight into tested methods of town and country church work, and understanding of the trends and problems of modern country life. To develop a fellowship among those engaged in rural Christian service. To develop contacts between agricultural leaders, particularly those in extension work, and rural pastors."

In short, the schools are centers for "continuing education." The courses offered have been tested by long experience.

Observance of Rural Life Sunday

Rural Life Sunday, the fifth Sunday after Easter, has been observed by many religious bodies since 1930. It finds its roots in the "Rogation Days" set apart by the early Christian Church for the purpose of offering special prayers to God for His blessing on the fruits of the soil.

In 1932 the joint Committee on Town and Country of the Home Missions Council and the Federal Council issued a Rural Life Sunday message to the churches. The opening paragraph was as follows: "Give us of your strongest leadership, O ye churches; give us of your greatest statesmanship, O ye seers and prophets. O ye brothers, hear the cry of the millions who live close to the heart of God but far from the hearts of men. Give us of your love and care and knowledge.' This is the appeal of those who dwell on the land!" The message closes with these words: "City and country are two parts of one whole; united, they stand; divided, they fall. May brotherly love prevail between city and country and between all the groups that make up rural America!"

The Larger Parish Movement

During 1932 there continued to be a great deal of interest in what has been called "The Larger Parish Plan" for the reorganization of the services of the rural church. The term "Larger Parish" is used rather loosely. It means simply that rural church life is organized into larger units than has been the case. Churches were originally located within walking distance of farm homes or at least within convenient distance for travel by team. Now good roads and the automobile have conquered distance to such an extent that the numerous small units are no longer needed.

The Larger Parish Plan calls for ministry to all the people, at least to all the Protestant constituency of an area. It calls for the maintenance of a diversified staff by the church, permitting division of labor. Usually in a Larger Parish there is a minister of worship, a director of religious education and a social or recreational worker. Larger Parishes have not yet been established in large numbers, but reports indicate that they continued to be organized during 1932.

The Community Church Movement

The Community Church Workers of the U. S. A., an association of individuals interested in the furtherance of the community church idea, held its biennial convention at Buffalo in May. It was a well-attended meeting which was evidence of the vitality of the movement. Community churches are of various types: federated local units, undenominational churches, churches with denominational affiliations, etc.

The Community Church Workers of the U. S. A. has been carrying on a diversified work of service for communities interested in working out local church adjustments. It is receiving annually about 2,000 inquiries from local communities and has been giving advice and assistance both by mail and in person to these inquirers.

The Program of Survey and Adjustment

Under the leadership of the Home Missions Council, studies have been made of the rural church situation in a number of states, and organized efforts have been made to speed up the process of making adjustments in communities where there is excessive competition between local churches. During the year there was published Every Community Survey of Connecticut, a study made largely by graduate students in the Hartford Theological Seminary and Yale Divinity School. This program of survey and adjustment is an outgrowth of the work of the Church Conference on Comity held in January, 1928, in Cleveland, Ohio.

The present economic situation is both advancing cooperation between local churches and preventing it. Everywhere it is being said that the times call loudly for increasing, more willing and more rapid cooperation. At the same time unemployment among ministers is forcing them to go to many of the smaller churches in villages and in the country, maintained by such support as these churches are able to afford in these difficult times.

Economic and Social Trends

As the year 1932 closes, the index of the price level of all agricultural products is only 60 per cent of that obtaining for agricultural prices prior to the World War. The tax burden per acre is 260 per cent of what it was in pre-war days. The drastic decline in prices is bringing a most serious decline of values and incomes in rural America. There are conservative economists who state that it is the most drastic readjustment which has taken place in the history of the United States.

There is a new public domain in the United States. It is made up of farm lands whose owners are unable to pay the taxes. Many farm operators are being permitted to continue solely because those who hold their mortgages are lenient and do not wish to foreclose.

RACE RELATIONS, 1932

GEORGE EDMUND HAYNES

(Dr. Haynes is Secretary of the Department of Race Relations, was formerly Professor of Sociology, Fisk University, and during the World War was Assistant to the Secretary of Labor in the U S Department of Labor)

In the Religious World

FOLLOWING the general line of principles and practical procedures worked out and submitted to religious organizations and allied agencies through the Department of Race Relations, Federal Council of Churches, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its quadrennial meeting on May 9 in Atlantic City adopted, after a heated debate, a resolution abolishing racial discrimination in any arrangement for subsequent conferences. Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, chairman of a committee that proposed it, said: "I believe that if no city under these conditions would be willing to entertain us, it would be better for us not to meet and that our refusal to meet would advance the kingdom of God as much as our meeting under present conditions."

Bishop William T. Manning, diocese of New York, on Sunday, October 23, 1932, with the aid of a locksmith forced his way into All Souls Protestant Episcopal Church, St. Nicholas Avenue near 116th Street, New York, officially declared the church in charge of the rector, Rev. Rolland Dodd, and preached a sermon supporting the rector's decision to admit Negroes to services and membership on equal terms with white parishioners. The vestry of the church had padlocked the edifice ostensibly because of repairs being made at the time.

There has been further cooperation this year between white and Negro church leaders in helping to meet the unemployment and relief crisis. Individual churchmen as well as church organizations have taken a stand for full participation of representatives of Negroes and other racial groups on committees and other agencies dealing with relief and emergency work.

Race Relations in Economic Life

Negroes have been awaking to the need of economic organization for business purposes. The National Negro Business League at its annual meeting held in New York summarized its success with a Colored Merchants Association, a series of chain grocery stores in a number of cities developed with the cooperation of white business organizations. A significant book The Southern Urban Negro as a Consumer, Paul K. Edwards, has attracted the attention of several large business corporations. A baking powder company employed Negro demonstrators in a definite move to penetrate the Negro buying public. A conference of farm demonstration agents of southwest Ohio was called by the Ohio Interracial Committee to discuss the possibility of settling indigent Negroes on nearby farmland. The consensus of opinion was that it could not be done.

The Department of Research and Education, in cooperation with the Department of Race Relations, Federal Council of Churches, carried forward a study of typical cotton-growing communities in Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi. The Department has arranged for staff assistance to press the matter of justice in race relations in economic life upon the attention of the churches and allied organizations. The National Urban League for social service among Negroes sponsored a Vocational Guidance week, April 17-24, which included the purpose to present the question to "as many white groups as possible." The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People submitted a report to President Hoover charging that Negroes working on the levees of the Mississippi River under the direction of army engineers were overworked, underpaid and otherwise maltreated. The President appointed a commission of three outstanding Negroes and an army officer to investigate the charges.

Competition has increased between Negroes and whites for jobs which the former group once dominated. Several instances were reported during the year of organized efforts in southern communities to bring pressure to bear on white employers to replace Negro employees with white workers. The Communists have promoted intensive propaganda among Negroes to convince them of their sympathies in their economic difficulties. For example, Negroes have been included in unemployed councils and among members of the "hunger marchers" to Washington in 1932.

The increasing unemployment has affected the movement of Mexicans across the border. Those entering the United States have greatly decreased. There has been heavy migration of Mexicans out of the United States. Their movement is not controlled by the quota law.

In the Educational Field

The Adult Education Movement has taken definite steps to include Negro groups. Experiments have been started in New York, Atlanta and other cities. Discussion groups for Negroes have been set up in branch libraries and other places.

Figures gathered by the Crisis in 1931-32 gave 19,256 students of Negro descent enrolled in colleges and 1,021 in professional schools; of the college students, 16,918 were enrolled in Negro colleges and 2,181 were enrolled in colleges with white students, while 238 received A.B. degrees and 146 received the A.M. degree from mixed institutions, 2,123 received A.B. degrees and 194 A.M. degrees from Negro institutions. Ph.D. degrees were conferred upon one Negro each at Brown, University of Chicago, Columbia, Cornell, Harvard, Minnesota, Western Reserve. Four Negro colleges, Fisk University, Hampton Institute, Atlanta University, and Howard University, were given "A" rating by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools without modification because of racial complexion of students. Several other Negro colleges were given "B" rating.

Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan, won the 100 meter race and the 200 meter race at the Olympics, Los Angeles, California, in August, 1932, for the first time for the United States. Another Negro, Ralph Metcalfe, ran second to Tolan in both races.

"The Green Pastures," the famous Negro religious play, with Richard B. Harrison as the star playing "De Lawd," has had continuous road success throughout 1932. Extensive study courses dealing with conditions among American Indians and with white and Indian relationships have been issued by the Missionary Education Movement for use by church study groups.

In Civic and Political Life

On March 24, 1932, the Alabama Supreme Court confirmed the death sentences of seven Negro boys convicted at Scottsboro, Alabama, April 9, 1931, for the alleged raping of two white girls who in overalls were riding with men on a freight train. The case attracted worldwide attention through the agitation of Communists and through defense of lawyers of International Labor Defense regarded as controlled by Communists. On appeal the United States Supreme Court, November 7, decided the boys had not received a trial by due process of law required under the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution.

Euel Lee was convicted in Towson County, Maryland, on the charge of murdering his employer. International Labor Defense lawyers fought and secured an appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals, which reversed Lee's conviction and ordered a retrial, July 5, 1932, on the ground that Negroes had been unconstitutionally excluded from the jury panel of the trial court.

Evidence of progress toward a lynchless land was found in the smallest number of victims in any year since 1886; eight in twelve months, six Negroes and two whites. The number in preceding years was 57 in 1922; 11 in 1928; 21 in 1930 and 13 in 1931. The Department of Race Relations, Federal Council of Churches, has annually published an Honor Roll of states free of lynching. States on this Honor Roll have fluctuated from 39 in 1923 to 43 in 1928; 38 in 1931 and 42 in 1932.

Following a decision of the United States Supreme Court in 1927 that under the Fourteenth Amendment the State of Texas could not exclude Negroes from voting in the Democratic primary, a state law was passed transferring authority to fix voters' qualifications from the state to the executive committee of political parties. On May 2, 1932, the United States Supreme Court reversed lower court decisions and ruled in favor of L. A. Nixon who sued for damages against James Condon and T. H. Kollé, because, acting under the Democratic executive committee, they had declined to furnish him with a ballot or to accept his vote in the Democratic primary. The Court held that the state statute had constituted the executive committees of political parties agents of the state. The act of the Democratic executive committee therefore was an act of the state and thus invalid. During the presidential campaign and election of 1932 there was a significant swing of Negro leaders and voters from the Republican to the Democratic ticket. This was especially marked in Virginia, New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

There has continued to be an observable increase in the number of Filipinos coming into the United States.

Special appeal has been made to the churches this year to increase their attention to the problems of the American Indians. Stress has been laid upon the change of policy by the United States Government in dealing with the original Americans from that of segregation to one of education and integration into civilized life.

INTER-FAITH RELATIONS

EVERETT R. CLINCHY

(The author is Executive Secretary of the National Conference of Jews and Christians)

ON MARCH 7, 8, and 9, 1932 (for the first time in history), Roman Catholics, Jews, and Protestants met in a national capital frankly to discuss areas of conflict, and to plan ways and means to promote justice, amity, understanding, and cooperation between the groups. After a general discussion of situations in American communities, the 475 registered members heard papers by Professors Carlton J. H. Hayes and E. B. Greene, historians, on the historical background of inter-faith relationships. Round-table methods prevailed at the sessions. Special interest groups studied areas of schools, universities, preaching, theological seminary instruction, local community goodwill, and journalism. Bishop James E. Freeman, Father Francis J. Haas, and Rabbi Abram Simon opened the proceedings. Hon. Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, closed the seminar. The National Conference of Jews and Christians, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y., organized this national assembly. This program is in its fifth year. Local conferences of Catholics, Jews, and Protestants have been held in cities from coast to coast, and continuation groups met during 1932 in New England, along the Atlantic seaboard, the south, the midwest, and on the Pacific Coast.

In the summer of 1932 Drew University (Madison, N. J.) started a year's work, under the department of Religious Education, to survey Sunday school textbooks and to test teacher attitudes, in an attempt to estimate the effects of Protestant Sunday schools in conditioning attitudes toward Jews.

The year 1932 witnessed a noteworthy rise in the degree of cooperation between Protestants, Jews, and Catholics. They joined in a statement on the unemployment situation; the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the Central Conference of American Rabbis, and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America united in supporting the relief needs. Communities throughout the nation are fast becoming accustomed to joint projects on which Catholics, Jews, Protestants unite in social service.

THE CHURCHES AND INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE, GOODWILL AND PEACE

SIDNEY L. GULICK

(The author is Executive Secretary of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ)

THE interest of the churches in the developing world drama centered in 1932 on the World Disarmament Conference, the China-Japan struggle, and Reparations and Inter-Governmental War Debts.

THE WORLD DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

The year 1932 will ever be remembered for the first World Disarmament Conference in all history. Its first session lasted from February 2 to July 23. Preparations for that conference had been going on for six years. The Preparatory Commission of the League of Nations had held meetings at frequent intervals. Many technical obstacles had been explored. The nations, not only members of the League, but the United States and Russia, also, had participated in that Commission and had furnished comprehensive statistics regarding their respective military establishments.

The reports of those meetings, and the Draft Protocol that resulted, had aroused the interest and the hopes of millions in many lands that at last genuine reduction of armaments would soon be achieved. But it was realized that only as public opinion supported and demanded those reductions would the governments agree to the necessary concrete measures.

In every country, therefore, the peace organizations transmitted the information to the people and aroused the will-to-disarmament. In this movement no agency was more active than the churches. National religious bodies adopted resolutions calling upon their membership to support the demand for disarmament. Popular petitions were widely circulated.

Resolution of the Federal Council of Churches

Representing its twenty-six constituent bodies, in December, 1931, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America formulated a policy as follows:

1. Actual reductions, not mere limitation, of sea, land and air armaments.
2. An immediate initial reduction of significant proportions in the existing military budgets of the nations.
3. Immediate abolition of all governmental preparations and appropriations for poison-gas and disease-germ warfare.
4. Establishment of a Permanent Disarmament Commission to supervise the observance of the disarmament agreements.

The Federal Council Petition

A petition embodying these objectives had been formulated earlier in the year, of which 27,000 copies were called for by church leaders. The number of signatures provided for on these petition blanks was over half a million. The petitions were forwarded by each local group direct to President Hoover.

Representation at Geneva

The churches and Christians of the world were represented at Geneva by seven great Christian world organizations, The Universal Christian Council for Life and Work, The World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, The World Alliance of the Y. M. C. A., The World's Y. W. C. A., The World's Student Christian Federation, The Friends' International Service, The International Fellowship of Reconciliation.

The Universal Christian Council for Life and Work represents most of the great church bodies of the world, including the various Protestant bodies, Lutheran, Evangelical, and Reformed, of every land, and the various Eastern Orthodox churches. The chief exception is the Roman Catholic Church.

Presentation of Popular Petitions

Due to the personal activity of President Mary E. Woolley, Vice-Chairman of the Federal Council's Department of International Justice and Goodwill, and member of the official American delegation to the Disarmament Conference, one plenary session early in the conference was devoted to receiving and hearing the popular petitions for disarmament from the common people of all the nations. These had been gathered largely by women's organizations in the various countries. The names affixed to the petitions were estimated at more than nine million. The presentation of these popular expressions of the people's desires was highly dramatic and impressive. The churches had their part in that great demonstration.

Support of Specific Proposals

In support of the proposal of the American delegation that, as a step toward security, weapons peculiarly fitted for aggression be abolished, the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council said, in part: "The drastic reduction or total abolition of such weapons would greatly enhance the significance of the Peace Pact, allay deep suspicions and fears among nations less prepared to make war, prevent rivalry in armaments among all nations, and tend to insure the success of the Disarmament Conference."

President Hoover's proposal in June that there be a general reduction by one-third of the existing armaments of all the nations, including the complete abolition of tanks, all chemical warfare, and all large mobile guns, the Administrative Committee described as "bold and statesmanlike." The churches of the United States were urged by the Federal Council to give it their active support. The heads of some twenty Protestant churches, members of the Federal Council, issued a statement assuring the President and the American delegation at Geneva of the moral support by Christians generally of these far-reaching, constructive proposals.

Resolution of the Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council of Churches

tion of Armaments which reads (in part) as follows:

"The success of the World Disarmament Conference, which reconvenes next month, hangs in the balance. The failure of the conference thus far to provide for the drastic reduction of military establishments is gravely disappointing. Despite the unparalleled economic disaster which has overtaken the world, the nations are spending four and one-half billion dollars annually on armaments. This situation is neither statesmanlike nor Christian.

"We give most hearty support to any definite program for reduction, such as the proposal of the United States Government which calls for a reduction of all armaments by approximately one-third, including the abolition of the so-called weapons of offense. We believe that for the sake of world justice and peace the nations which defined aggression when disarming Germany must accept for themselves the implications of that decision. They must agree to put an end to their armaments for aggression. Such an agreement, we believe, would insure the success of the Disarmament Conference, bring about enormous economies, and instantly promote confidence and goodwill among the nations. We appeal to our people and to our government to press for such a program with utmost vigor. We pray that all nations may unite in this program."

THE CHINA-JAPAN STRUGGLE

The acute stage of the China-Japan struggle began in Manchuria, September, 1931, and became tragic in Shanghai in February, 1932. The interest of the churches in this struggle was due, in part, to their concern for the Christian movement in those lands and their hope that Christians might exert a wholesome influence. In this they were not disappointed, for Japanese and Chinese Christians were active in exchanging telegrams, in meeting together, as Christians, and in expressing to their respective governments their earnest pleas for justice and peace. Cable messages of Christian sympathy and hope were also exchanged between the Christians of the United States and those of China and Japan.

Christian interest in the Far Eastern situation was also due to anxiety regarding its probable disastrous bearing on the Disarmament Conference and on the new collective machinery of the world for peace, the arbitration treaties, the Covenant of the League of Nations, and the Pact of Paris.

As bearing upon the international policies of the American Government, the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches assured the Administration in Washington of its support in the efforts to prevent further military conflict. In a "Message to the Churches" it declared that "under no circumstances whatsoever should the United States allow itself to be drawn into a war with China or Japan, nor should it join with other powers in any measure of military coercion." It urged church support of the policy of "non-recognition" of gains secured in violation of the Pact of Paris, of an embargo on arms and on financial aid to covenant-breaking states, and, as a last resort, by means of non-intercourse, an "embargo on trade" unaccompanied by any use of force or violence.

WAR DEBTS

In reply to an appeal from more than fifty Christian leaders in England, addressed to American Christians, suggesting cancellation of war debts by the United States, the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council, in a long and carefully prepared statement, expressed the conviction that "a revision downward, both of war debts and of reparations, is essential."

Stressing the Christian teaching of the oneness of the human family and the modern "interdependence of the nations," it stated that "the United States should be prepared to accept a new settlement," which, however, "should be accompanied by assurances on the part of the debtor nations that the money thus remitted will not be spent directly or indirectly for increased war preparations."

IV

OTHER INTERESTS

In addition to the foregoing major interests, the churches have concerned themselves with several other matters bearing on world justice, goodwill and peace. Mention should be made of

1. The growing observance of Armistice Sunday, and World Goodwill Sunday.

2. Education of the members of the churches through attractive popular literature.

3. Opposition to compulsory military training in civilian educational institutions.

4. The insistent demand that citizenship should not be conditioned on willingness to bear arms contrary to conscience.

5. Growing conviction that the United States should promptly adhere to the World Court.

6. Desire that the United States Government should enter into formal obligation to confer with the signatories of the Pact of Paris, whenever a war menace arises.

7. Developing convictions that the United States should join with other nations in controlling the private manufacture of and trade in munitions of war.

Unemployment Relief

R EPORTS from all over the country indicate that the churches have continued during 1932 their intensive efforts in relief for the unemployed. Their programs have generally been closely coordinated with established social agencies and public relief. Statistics reveal that, as a matter of fact, 70 per cent of all funds for unemployment relief (including mother's aid and old age pensions in 1931) came from government sources.*

But it must be remembered that perhaps the largest item of relief never finds place in the statistics, i.e., the help given by the poor to each other, the help of relatives and much discreet relief given by churches to families in their own parishes. Many churches have felt it their first duty to care for families in their own congregations, and this is generally requested by social agencies.

There have been a few cases of churches throwing open their auditoriums for homeless men to sleep in but this practice is generally not approved by social experts, nor by boards of health because church buildings lack proper sanitary arrangements for such use. On the other hand churches and religious organizations such as missions, the Salvation Army, the Goodwill Industries, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. have provided special dormitory buildings for homeless men and women.

And, in addition, there is no doubt that a large part of the financial support of charitable institutions and social agencies comes from the voluntary gifts of church people.

* Report of Children's Bureau and Russell Sage Foundation.

The churches therefore have participated in general relief far beyond the confines of their own congregations.

Councils of churches, denominational social service departments and the Federal Council of Churches have acted as clearing houses for information and maintained contacts with community, state and national social and governmental agencies. The Social Service Department of the Federal Council issued suggestions on unemployment activities for local churches which were printed in practically all the religious papers.

Space prohibits description of special programs carried on by certain councils of churches and local churches which included in some cases operation of employment bureaus, canvassing for jobs, lodging houses, distribution of coal, wood, food, clothing. Churches and Christian associations have also put on special recreational and educational programs and extended their facilities to the unemployed.

A special project in relief on a large scale has been carried on by the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) in six states, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Tennessee, in the soft coal areas. Forty thousand children were fed. Fifty tons of clothing were distributed. This work has had the official endorsement of the Federal Council of Churches, which has acted as agent for collection of funds and clothing from the churches. All denominations and the church press have assisted. The program is to continue for 1932-33, and now includes rehabilitation and reconstruction features, subsistence gardening, canning, dressmaking, furniture making, weaving, and home industries, as well as experiments in farm placement of unemployed miners and farmer-miner developments.

Toward the end of 1932 a feeling had begun to make itself felt in many cities that the usual relief methods, no matter how skilfully guided by social workers, fail to meet the fact that a long period of enforced idleness brings spiritual and mental as well as physical deterioration.

Some unemployed workers go to pieces under the strain of anxiety which issues in despair, even in suicide. Others lose the capacity, even the desire to work. Lack of regular work, the indignity of having little or nothing to do tend to bring about moral deterioration. For this reason a number of churches are taking a keen interest in the experiments in self-help among the unemployed, both along the lines of the Unemployed Citizens League, and those organized systems whereby the unemployed make and exchange among themselves basic commodities of clothing, shelter, food and personal services, using tokens or scrip as a basis of exchange.

One church operated its own farm and its own tailor shop, city and rural unemployed exchanging food and clothes. The Federal Council of Churches is collecting information on the experiments in self-help among the unemployed themselves, and making it available to churches interested in new methods of relief.

Trends in Christian Social Thinking

The conviction has been increasing in church circles that no form of relief is enough, that religion should demand a better social order, planned to meet human need. There appears to be a trend toward more searching analysis of the economic order among the rank and file of the ministry. This is reflected also in many church pronouncements, notable among which have been the Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist, Episcopalian and others.

The recent pronouncement by the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the 1931 Encyclical of the Pope, the Labor Sunday Message of the Federal Council of Churches, and the joint statement on unemployment issued in January, 1932, by the Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the Social Justice Commission, Central Conference of American Rabbis, and the Social Service Commission of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which called for an adequate federal aid and public works program, unemployment insurance, old age pensions, a redistribution of wealth and income, and economic planning have been significant contributions to social thinking. The revised Social Ideals of the Churches adopted December 7 at the Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council at Indianapolis dealt with many problems of the social order. (See page 319).

In addition to pronouncements more churches have taken an interest in social legislation. Information has been supplied to councils of churches and through denominational departments to local churches on pending legislation for federal aid, public works, housing projects to rebuild slum areas, unemployment insurance, old age pensions, accident prevention, workmen's compensation, child labor, and protection of women workers. The State of Wisconsin has adopted the first Unemployment Reserve law in America. Churches and ministers helped, according to reports from the field, the state bodies of Presbyterians and Congregationalists declaring in its favor and individual Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal ministers favoring it at hearings.

Mediation and Relief

Efforts toward mediation in industrial conflict have been made in a number of cities by ministers, priests and rabbis as in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Trenton, New York, Lawrence, and in the coal fields. The Church Emergency Relief Committee, an unofficial group of churchmen, has secured several thousand dollars from church people for relief of families in strike areas. Factual information on industrial conditions in many industries has been made available through the Social Service Department and the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council of Churches.

Educational Program

In order to gear relief into an educational process study courses have been promoted for church groups both on unemployment, its causes and proposed remedies (Unemployment: A Discussion Outline), and on the problems of the coal industry (The Human Price of Coal) in order to build up an informed public opinion and to arouse the conscience of the Church to demand intelligent and constructive reorganization of industry so as to eliminate the tragic suffering of unemployment. The Department of Research of the Federal Council has also recently published a study outline, Our Economic Life in the Light of Christian Ideals, which offers an analysis of the present system and proposed ways to a better economic order. There is wide demand for such courses especially for young people's groups in the churches.

During the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in Cincinnati, labor representatives were invited to speak in Cincinnati churches, fostering sympathetic understanding between the Church and labor. The Cincinnati Federation of Churches made these arrangements.

International Religious and Economic Relations

A significant event of the year was the conference on the Churches and the World Economic Crisis, held in Basle, Switzerland, under the auspices of the Universal Christian Council on Life and Work (Stockholm). The Industrial Secretary of the Social Service Department of the Federal Council attended as a delegate from American churches.

The report of this conference—which was the first of its kind—called for reduction of debts and armaments, lowering of tariff barriers, and increased international economic cooperation. The findings of the conference were published in 2,000 newspapers in Europe alone. It was considered a portent of a more brotherly world that the churches of many lands should join in a pronouncement insisting upon a closer approach to international brotherhood in economic relations.

CHURCH AND STATE IN 1932

F. ERNEST JOHNSON

(The author is Secretary of the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council)

AS A PRESIDENTIAL election year, 1932 presented a sharp contrast to 1928, when the nation was torn with religious controversy and when the Protestant church forces were instrumental in winning certain states for the presidential candidate who declared for the maintenance of national prohibition. In 1932 the religious issue was virtually excluded because both candidates were Protestants, and only rumblings of the former struggle were heard. In a measure, also, the prohibition issue was removed from the campaign, since both major parties had declared for resubmission and both major party candidates had advocated abandonment of the present national prohibition policy.

At the same time, there was a decided difference between the known attitudes of the two major candidates and between the two platforms with reference to the prohibition issue. The conclusion cannot be avoided, therefore, that the overwhelming victory of the "wetter" of the two parties and candidates marked a change in the fortunes of organized (Protestant) religion in political dealing with prohibition.

It is true that not all the Protestant bodies have been committed to prohibition and that of late the Protestant constituency has been less aggressive in its attitude on this question, less resolute, less sure, and, hence, less active. This would perhaps go without saying since the churches represent, after all, substantially a cross-section of the community. But the fact that official church bodies for the most part maintained their stand in support of the Eighteenth Amendment and that the electorate did not heed the call to defend it indicates a slackening, for the present, at least, of the political influence of official Protestantism in this field.

This generalization is quite independent of the question to what extent the last election was a "referendum" on prohibition. It may be granted that no such election is ever a referendum on any one issue. The point is that, while the influence of a politically conscious Protestantism was able in 1928 to break down political boundaries of long standing in the interest of definite political ends, in 1932 their effort to secure platforms and to influence the election in line with these same ends was relatively unsuccessful.

The Coming Report on Church and State

Recognition of the confused state of thinking in America, within and outside the churches, with reference to the relation of religion to politics, and the bitterness following the national elections of 1928 were among the reasons for initiation of the Federal Council's study of the relation of Church and State, which was carried almost to completion during 1932. The need was strongly felt of a clear and common definition by the Protestant churches of the areas of authority proper to the Church and to the State. A clarification of the legitimate functioning of the Church in political matters was urgently called for, at least to the extent of defining consensus and dissensus.

It is now recognized that the American doctrine of the separation of Church and State in practice settles little. Legislation is relied upon for the protection of the corporate rights of the Church as an institution. Measures of social reform, such as those involved in the so-called Social Ideals of the Churches, must be buttressed by law. Questions such as the right of conscientious objection to war and the right to citizenship bring the Church and the State face to face on the issue of freedom of conscience.

The most persistent issue is, perhaps, that of the exclusion of religious education from the public schools. The churches are awaking to a realization that there is throughout the country a dearth of effective teaching of religion and that some plan for their cooperation with the agencies of public education must be worked out.

The Federal Council's Committee on the Relation of Church and State has been working on these problems. With the aid of eminent scholars, the history of the age-long controversy between Church and State has been sketched, the issues analyzed, the policies and practices of different church bodies outlined, and the opinions of representative church leaders assembled with a view to making a clearer definition than now obtains of the functions of the two institutions in relation to each other.

Foreign Policy

Next to the prohibition issue, perhaps the political question of greatest concern to the churches is disarmament. During 1932 a sustained effort was made by church organizations and the religious press to build up moral support for the Disarmament Conference. Here, again, the great obstacles encountered by the conference limited the effectiveness of efforts by religious bodies and agencies to secure political expression of their ideals. It is probable that the depression also has considerably slowed down church activity in this field. During the year one of the major church bodies dissolved, for budgetary reasons, its commission on world peace.

On the other hand, evidence accumulates that the churches are becoming more determined to have a voice in American foreign policy. The revision of the Social Ideals of the Churches effected by the Federal Council of Churches in December, 1932, resulted in the inclusion in that statement of the following article:

"The churches should stand for repudiation of war, drastic reduction of armaments, participation in international agencies for the peaceable settlement of all controversies; and the building of a cooperative world order."

The Church and State Action

The interest of the churches in unemployment, which has been very marked during the depression, appears to have taken on during the past year or two more of a political aspect. That is to say, there seems to be an increasing conviction among religious leaders that state action on a larger scale than has been attempted thus far is necessary if Christian ideals are to be realized in the field of economic justice. The publication, during the year, under the auspices of the Federal Council's Research Department, of Our Economic Life in the Light of Christian Ideals, a study course for the use of churches and Christian associations, illustrates this trend. The book is aimed directly at linking Christian ethics with the movement for a planned economy to be attained through state and voluntary action.

It is perhaps appropriate to record here the great interest taken by religious leaders in the socialist platform and candidates in the elections of 1982. Of like import is the conversion of The World Tomorrow, previously a monthly journal presenting a radical Christian viewpoint, into a weekly paper frankly committed to socialism. The change is probably significant of a trend in Christian thinking in the direction of collectivism motivated by Christian ideals.

CHURCH UNION AND FEDERATION

SAMUEL MCCREA CAVERT

(The author is General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America)

IN THE United States the year 1982 did not witness any outstanding advance toward the union of any denominational groups such as the merger of the three Methodist bodies of England in one united Methodist Church last September. There was, however, considerable discussion (1) of two Presbyterian groups; (2) of unions of Lutheran groups; (3) of the Reformed Church in the U. S. and the Evangelical Synod. There were also some other negotiations, or at least conversations, concerning union which are not yet far advanced.

A fully formulated proposal for union between the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and the United Presbyterian Church of North America is now under consideration. This had its origin in a proposal in 1929 for a general union of the Presbyterian and Reformed bodies. The General Synod of the Reformed Church in America and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. (South) in 1981, however, decided not to participate in further negotiations for organic union, leaving only the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and the United Presbyterian Church to carry on the plan.

At the General Assemblies of these two bodies in 1982, a "plan for organic union" was submitted. By the Presbyterian Assembly it was warmly approved but the transmitting of the plan to the Presbyteries for their official vote was deferred in order to allow further time for study of the plan and revision at certain points. In the United Presbyterian Assembly no final action was taken, the General Assembly's committee on the subject being continued for further conference with the committee appointed by the Presbyterian General Assembly.

A joint meeting of the Committees on Organic Union of the two denominations was held in Pittsburgh, November 1-2, 1982, at which the plan of union was somewhat revised in the light of various suggestions which had been received since the meeting of the General Assemblies in the spring. On a few points which were found difficult of settlement, the joint committee decided not to attempt to arrive at final conclusions at that time but to continue consideration of them until the next meeting on February 8, 1938.

In the Southern Presbyterian Church, a plan for "federal union" was presented at the General Assembly of 1932 and approved. There have been no indications, however, that other Presbyterian or Reformed bodies are interested in a proposal which would not bring the various members of the Presbyterian family into a closer union than that contemplated in the Southern Presbyterian proposal.

The Presbyterians and Methodists

The "conversations" between the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and the Methodist Episcopal Church concerning possibilities of union, begun in 1928, have remained in a state of inactivity during the past year, partly because the Presbyterian Church was pre-occupied with its plan for union with the United Presbyterian Church, and partly because the Methodist Episcopal Church is at present more interested in the possibility of union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church. These three Methodist bodies have been working upon the production of a joint hymnal. If the three groups can unite in using the same hymnal, why, it is asked, is it necessary for them longer to remain apart in other respects? The example set by the re-union of the three Methodist bodies in England during 1932 has also had a stimulating effect upon the desire for Methodist re-union in the United States.

Reformed and Evangelical

A vigorous movement is under way looking toward the union of the Reformed Church in the U. S. and the Evangelical Synod of N. A. At the General Synod of the Reformed Church in the U. S., held in Akron, Ohio, in the summer, a plan for union with the Evangelical Synod was approved unanimously and with a high degree of enthusiasm. The proposal is now being voted upon by the local units of the denomination. The Evangelical Synod is expected to give careful consideration to the plan when its quadrennial session is held in 1938.

The Lutheran Urge to Union

The most extensive plan for union at the present time, although still in a very informal stage, is that which is beginning to be discussed within the Lutheran family. Substantial progress toward union has been made during recent years. In 1918, the United Lutheran Church in America was formed through the merger of three national bodies. In 1930, the union of three important synods (Joint Ohio, Iowa and Buffalo) brought into being the American Lutheran Church.

The creation of the American Lutheran Church was followed by its joining with four other groups (Augustana Synod, Lutheran Free Church, United Danish Church and Norwegian Lutheran Church—the last of these being itself a merger of three separate bodies) in forming a federated body known as the American Lutheran Conference.

The other Lutheran bodies have established the Lutheran Synodical Conference. Thus the many national bodies of Lutherans in America, during the period after the World War, have come to be gathered into three main sections

The most important further step during 1932 was the action of the Missouri Synod, the most conservative of all the Lutheran bodies, at its Convention in Milwaukee, June 15-24, in providing for the appointment of "a Committee on Synodical Union, which is to investigate the possibility of union with other synods constituting the Synodical Conference and to confer with similar committees appointed by other synods." The preamble to the resolution states that "the ultimate aim of all the synods constituting the Synodical Conference of N. A. is, among other things, the uniting of all Lutheran Synods of America into one orthodox American Lutheran Church."

The problem created by the use of different languages in various Lutheran bodies is dealt with in the preamble by saying that "language need form no barrier to an organic union of the synods in one body since the foreign language groups could continue to function as extra-territorial districts until such time as their congregations could also use the language of the country."

Another indication of the interest in Lutheran unity is a symposium which appeared in the Augustana Quarterly in July, 1932, on "My Idea of a United Lutheran Church in America." Editors of official Lutheran papers contributed to the symposium. A perusal of the four articles makes it clear that their authors agree in the conviction that Lutheran unity must be on the basis of agreement on the historic confessions of the Church.

At the Biennial Convention of the United Lutheran Church in September, 1932, exceedingly cordial greetings were exchanged between it and the American Lutheran Church.

As to the possibilities of Protestant union on a much wider scale, and even of a general uniting of all churches, see page 308 for the preliminary results of a survey conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research, under the direction of Dr. H. Paul Douglass.

Cooperation and Federation

Most observers of American religious life, however much they may in theory be committed to the idea of union, agree that the crux of general interdenominational relationships today lies in the securing of a larger degree of organized cooperation and federation which, while not interfering with the independence of the various denominations, brings them into an effective working unity and ministers to a more inclusive fellowship.

Few recent books on the situation in the American churches fail to call attention to this. To take a single illustration, the monumental volume, Religion in Various Cultures, by two Columbia University professors, H. L. Friess and H. W. Schneider (Henry Holt and Company, 1932) concludes its long survey of religions of the world from animism to modern Christianity by saying: "It is clear that the divisive tendency which seemed to be inherent in Protestantism is being reversed today. . . . Nothing is now more evident than the general desire among the leaders of the Church to achieve some permanent form of organized cooperation, if not organic unity. . . . The most effective instrument as yet created is the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America."

(For the record of church co-operation and federation during the past year, see pages 98-100).

Christian Cooperation for Disarmament

CERTAIN visible signs of a new kind of Christian cooperation were evident all through the early months of the year at Geneva. Following a demonstration of the Christian will-to-peace at the opening of the Disarmament Conference, February 6, 1982, the Disarmament Committee of the International Christian Organizations carried on daily worship services in the American Church (Episcopal) in Geneva; maintained an information service; arranged interpretative lectures on the work of the Conference; and kept in constant touch with Christian leaders throughout the world.

(Cf. Vox Populi, published by Vox Populi Committee, 5 Place de la Taconnerie, Geneva, pp. 34-40, 80.)

Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, then Administrative Secretary of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work, was instrumental in setting up the cooperative effort of the church organizations which included The World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, Friends' International Service, International Fellowship of Reconciliation, World's Young Women's Christian Association, World Alliance of Y. M. C. A.'s, World Student Christian Federation. No similar ocular demonstration of genuine cooperation on a world scale has ever been made. Its effects were immediate and will, in the judgment of witnesses, not be forgotten as indicating a coming Christian solidarity.

(Cf. Federal Council Bulletin, Vol. XV, No. 3, March, p. 19)

World Churches and Unemployment Relationships

At Basle, in April, there met a summing-up conference of church experts on economic problems connected with unemployment. It came as the consummation of an effort at collective study on a wide scale begun by the Research Department of the Universal Christian Council in London in 1980. National conferences were held in 1981 on the same subject, and from these findings were sent to Geneva. On the basis of these the Basle conference was set up. Its statements on the current situation were heralded throughout Europe as of importance in preparing the minds of the people for the Lausanne Conference to whose leaders the findings of the Basle group were presented officially. James Myers, Federal Council Industrial Secretary, represented the Council and the American Section of the Life and Work movement.

(Cf. The Churches and the World Economic Crisis obtainable from the Universal Christian Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.)

Sweden Unifies Ecumenical Relationships

Of prophetic significance is the formation in April at Stockholm of a unified council with sections corresponding to the three world movements—the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work, and the World Conference on Faith and Order. It is to be supported by an "Ecumenical Association" of which Christians of all churches may become members. Thus Sweden shows a way for greater compactness and effectiveness of ecumenical organization. (Cf. Christian Century, May 11, 1932, p. 617.)

World Movements Unite Administrative Functions

The same impulses and ideals underlie the action of the two first named organizations—the Alliance and the Universal Christian Council—in unifying their administration under a single individual. Henri L. Henriod, former secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation, has become joint general secretary for both, and will conduct their affairs from a single office, 2 rue de Montchoisy, Geneva.

(Cf. Minutes of Management Committee, 1932, World Alliance, New York, N. Y., and Minutes of Universal Christian Council, New York, N. Y.)

Friends of Reunion in Great Britain

That relations may be closer between the Faith and Order Conference and the foregoing, official consultation has been initiated and much progress has been made. This is best shown by the formation at High Leigh, England, during the meeting of the British Section of the Conference, of an association to be known as "Friends of Reunion." It will seek to do for the British churches what the "Ecumenical Association" is to do in Sweden. The conference at High Leigh demonstrated a further important fact: i.e., that the approach of experience to the great Christian doctrines is unifying rather than divisive. Special stress was laid upon the personal experience of members of the conference with the Eucharist; and their varying descriptions of inner meanings in this central Christian sacrament brought out vividly a unity which overshadowed intellectual differences.

(Cf. Minutes of High Leigh meeting, World Conference on Faith and Order, 57 rue de Lausanne, Geneva, Ralph Brown, Sec.)

International Missionary Council Sees New Cooperative Spirit

Herrnhut, Germany, welcomed to the historic birthplace of foreign missions in modern Europe the International Missionary Council's world committee. It met from June 23 to July 4, the executive body of the Council which last met in Jerusalem in 1928, to review progress in the application of the recommendations of that gathering. The program stressed evangelism, industrial research and counsel, cooperation, and spiritual power. In the light of the subsequent recommendations of the Laymen's Foreign Missions Inquiry, it is worth noting that this Herrnhut committee expressed the belief that "we stand on the threshold of a new period in cooperation—a period in which the requirements, principles, and spirit of missionary cooperation shall be considered more thoroughly, seriously, and sacrificially than ever." And the council's officers were instructed to make the furthering of constructive measures of cooperation a major task at once.

(Cf. Minutes of Herrnhut meeting: International Missionary Council, New York, N. Y.; Christian Century, August 3, 1932, pp 958-960.)

First International Conference of Social Work

The International Conference of Social Work, held at Frankfurt-on-the-Main, July 10-14, was on the subject, "The Family." Religious emphases were clear, and a new alignment between social service and the churches was manifest.

(Cf. 1st International Conference of Social Work, printed in Paris, obtainable through Federal Council of Churches, New York, N. Y.)

The Word for All the World

Historic Bible House in London was the scene in late July of a meeting for the first time of the representatives of the world's major Bible societies to plan for further cooperative effort in making the Bible available and known to all mankind. The group considered all aspects of their work which, despite depression and oppression, is progressing. Both Spain and Italy are open as never before for the circulation of the Bible. The demand in the Far East continues to grow. The Bible is now published in whole or in part in 981 languages.

(Cf. Bible Society Record, Vol. 77, pp. 165-166, October, 1932.)

Non-Roman Christendom in United Action

On August 10 the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work assembled in the same room in Geneva where the movement began in 1920—as plans were laid for the Stockholm Conference of 1925. This infant world federation of churches—for such it is—has found itself continually confronted with challenging difficulty. But it has grown steadily as a vital symbol of the existing unity in life and work of the non-Roman world. Through it Anglicanism, Eastern Orthodox Catholicism, the Old Catholics of the Continent, and Protestantism have made a united approach to some of the main social problems of the time: war, unemployment, exploitation, calendar reform. Its commissions have been dealing with the questions outlined at Stockholm, and its research department has won the respect of international organizations at Geneva. The meeting this year saw the consummation of a plan for united administration with the World Alliance, as already noted. Plans were instituted for the holding of an enlarged meeting of the Council in 1934 and a world conference before 1937—the exact year to be determined later. The problems of disarmament, of unemployment, and of the Christian approach to economic changes were considered, as also the basic attitudes of historic ecclesiastical groups toward the social application of the gospel. The Lord Bishop of Chichester, England, continues as chairman of the Council in the place of the late Bishop Woods of Winchester. The Orthodox Church invites the Executive Committee of the Council to meet at Novi Sad in 1933, thus establishing a most significant precedent. Joint conferences on social action through the churches are to be held in the Balkans under the Council and the World Alliance in the near future.

Youth and the Ecumenical Movement

Following the Council a conference of youth under similar joint auspices was held at Gland, near Lausanne, and was attended by Christian youth leaders from many lands. It served to manifest and emphasize the place of youth in the program of the churches for international relations.

(Cf. Minutes, August 11, 1932, Universal Christian Council, New York, N. Y.)

World's Chief Religions Face Common Task

The World Conference on Peace Through Religion held a planning meeting in Geneva in August at which many races, nations, and religions were represented through distinguished spokesmen. They advanced the preparations for a significant world gathering to be held when economic conditions make it practicable.

(Cf. Minutes of World Conference on Peace Through Religion, New York, N. Y.)

World Alliance Attacks Peace Problems

The Management Committee of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches met at the International School, Geneva, August 19-22. Important matters coming to its attention were the disarmament situation, the revision of treaties, and the problems of minorities. Passionate but courteous and amicable discussions were held of these vital problems, and the program of the Alliance through its 32 national councils was adjusted to meet the needs of the hour. The attitude of influential public men in Europe toward this manifestation of religious concern with world affairs was shown in important communications from Arthur Henderson and others. The organization has real and useful influence, and its circle of contacts is widening.

(Cf. Minutes, Geneva Meeting, World Alliance, New York, N. Y.)

Mutual Aid Improves Church Morale

At Belotte, Switzerland, August 22-24, the Central Bureau for Inter-Church Aid met in its tenth annual session. Faced with a review of the situation in European churches, the members avoided pessimism while manifesting realistic and intelligent interest in constructive measures. Under the immense difficulties of the present time the Christian communities are showing courage, faith, and hope. They derive much of the latter important spiritual quality from the closer contact now established between the helping agencies of the stronger churches.

(Cf. Minutes, Central Bureau, American Office, New York, N. Y.)

Methodists Complete Notable Reunion

During the late summer England witnessed the greatest recent merger of Christian denominations of the same ecclesiastical family. Three branches—representing a number of other previously merged bodies—came together at Royal Albert Hall in the persons of more than ten thousand delegates to form a United Methodist Church. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman as chairman of the American Section of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work and Bishop Francis J. McConnell as president of the Federal Council were specially invited guests on that historic occasion. The effects of this type of “family reunion” are far-reaching and tend to develop a helpful “unitive” momentum in Christendom. The legal and technical processes involved require much time; the British Methodist merger has been in the making for more than twenty years.

(Cf. Christian Advocate, pp. 1198-99, November 10, 1982, New York, N. Y.)

United Approach to Religious Education

Thirty-three nations were represented by more than 1,000 delegates at the World Sunday School Convention July 25 at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. It was the first gathering of the kind south of the equator and notable in more ways than one. The theme was “The Living Christ.” This awakened great interest in South America, where there is a new view of the Master coming to expression. Simultaneously with the conference, Dr. George Stewart, of Stamford, Conn., led a group of young people from 18 countries in a world council of youth on the work of the Sunday school. More than 10,000 people attended the closing session, and the result of the gathering was a renewed emphasis on the person of Christ in the teaching ministry of the churches. Incidental international influences set in motion by the gathering of so many world Christian leaders are impossible to trace but are none the less real.

(Cf. Minutes of the Rio de Janeiro Meeting, World Sunday School Association, New York, N. Y. Federal Council Bulletin, October, 1982, p. 21.)

tain remarkable facts: there was a new and vital emphasis on faith in God and the supreme gift of His love in Christ; more was heard about ways to a better future than of lament for a present depression; there was everywhere a practical concern for the inclusion of youth in the manifold work of the churches; the "unitive" forces set against nationalism and racialism were evident in many ways; and there emerged ever more clearly the growing conviction that the world is one, does not contain the solution for its own problems, and must advance together in a common dependence upon God.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC FIELD

CHARLES A. McMAHON

Editor, Catholic Action

THE Catholic Church, by reason of her divine mission as custodian and teacher of revealed truth, is a great social institution. Through her bishops and clergy, aided by the faithful, she carries on a variety of works—education, charity, social welfare, all intended to advance primarily the spiritual well-being of the individual and of society, and in a secondary way the material welfare of all. The following statement presents a necessarily brief and incomplete account of some outstanding Catholic interests and activities during the year 1932—a period which, despite the unfortunate economic situation, was characterized by notable accomplishments in all sections of the United States through a great diversity of activities.

In the United States the National Catholic Welfare Conference is the officially established agency of the bishops of the country through which unity and coordination in Catholic action and activities are effected. The conference does not seek to initiate such activities but is the appointed agency of their union and their united action.

The term Catholic action or Catholic activity we may say at once is not in any sense political, nor does it in any way engage in partisan or party politics. Under the Department of Lay Organizations of the National Catholic Welfare Conference thirty-five hundred societies of Catholic men and women have federated, comprising the National Council of Catholic Men and the National Council of Catholic Women. These federated societies are of many different types—mission societies, charity organizations, lay religious societies, fraternal orders, young men and women's associations, Holy Name societies, alumni associations, cultural and civic groups, societies of foreign born, sodalities, etc.—some organized on a national and others on a state-wide, diocesan, local or parish basis. All these in their union comprise and are in turn aided and helped by the central, unifying agency—the N. C. W. C. Department of Lay Organizations.

Holy See

On February 12, 1932, His Holiness, Pope Pius XI, celebrated the tenth anniversary of his coronation as Supreme Pontiff. He has shown unusual familiarity with conditions in the United States and sympathetic concern not only for the Church but for the American people as a whole. His constant interest and approval of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, official center and clearing house of Catholic action in the United States, and of the Catholic University of America have been a source of the greatest inspiration and strength to those two great institutions controlled and directed by the American hierarchy.

The Holy Father issued three new encyclicals during the year: Lux Veritatis (English title—"The Light of Truth"), on the 15th centenary of the Council of Ephesus; Caritate Christi Compulsi (English title—"The Sacred Heart and World Distress"), a touching appeal to "men of goodwill to unite in a crusade of love and succor" in the present world economic crisis; and Acerba Animi (English title—"The Church and Mexico"), dealing with the present status of the persecution of the Church in Mexico.

The Holy Father's Quadragesimo Anno encyclical ("Reconstructing the Social Order," issued May 15, 1931) has been the subject of widespread study and discussion during the past year. The Holy Father's analysis of the cause of the breakdown of the world social order and his recommendations for remaking economic and social society have been accepted by many leading economists, industrialists, students, and others interested in finding a way out of the present difficulties.

During the year, the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems, sponsored by the Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, has been especially active in expounding the Quadragesimo Anno encyclical as well as other Catholic teaching bearing on the problems of labor and industry through a series of regional meetings held in Albany, Baltimore, Denver, Los Angeles, Providence, and New Bedford. In these meetings, in addition to formal addresses by employers, employes, and leading authorities in this particular field, discussion is open to all interested persons—Catholic and non-Catholic. The conference does not adopt formal resolutions.

General Statistics

The Official Catholic Directory (P. J. Kenedy & Sons, New York) gives the Catholic population of the United States in 1932 as 20,236,391. Other figures presented in the directory's general summary are: number of priests, 28,297; number of churches, 18,152; orphan asylums, 328; orphans, 50,718; homes for the aged, 147; hospitals, 645; converts, 40,269.

American Hierarchy

During the year, in the one hundred and five archdioceses and dioceses of the United States, the four cardinals, fifteen archbishops and eighty-six bishops have, as ordinaries in their respective jurisdictions, given the closest attention to the need for charity and relief, co-operating wholeheartedly with local agencies in their programs of relief, employment and thrift as well as utilizing to the limit of their resources the multifold Catholic charity institutions.

In practically every diocese opportunity for employment was supplied to large numbers of the unemployed through the adoption of diocesan building projects covering the construction of schools, hospitals, etc., thereby aiding industry and relieving or preventing a large volume of unemployment.

Catholics everywhere not only cooperated wholeheartedly with public and civic agencies of relief, but gave liberally to relief supplied through parish and diocesan organizations such as the St. Vincent de Paul conferences, central Catholic charity bureaus, employment bureaus, and the other established Catholic agencies of relief and assistance to the poor, sick and aged.

Through the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the archbishops and bishops of the United States cooperated with the National Citizens Committee of the Welfare and Relief Mobilization and the President's Anti-Hoarding Conference.

Catholic Education, General

The religious education of Catholic youth is naturally the Church's foremost educational concern. The statistics quoted herewith under "Catholic School System in the United States" reveal the extent of the sacrifices which the Catholics of this country are making to give their children a sound Christian training. It has been estimated that the separately maintained Catholic school system saves the public $250,000,000 annually. In addition, Catholics, of course, pay their full share in taxes for the support of the public schools.

Constant progress is being made in the religious instruction of Catholic children attending the public schools. Week-day religious schools are now common in all parts of the country. During the summer of 1932, according to Rev. Edgar Schmiedeler, O.S.B., Director, Rural Life Bureau, N. C. W. C., more than 1,500 Catholic vacation schools were conducted, with an attendance of approximately 100,000 children. These schools were organized mainly in rural areas, especially throughout the West and South, although many urban sections participated in the movement.

Retreats for Catholic pupils attending public high schools are also becoming more numerous. The liturgical movement, fostered particularly by the Benedictine Fathers, has attained a flourishing state in the cathedral parishes and schools of the principal archdioceses. The Catholic Students Mission Crusade, Newman Clubs and Catholic Student Leadership Movement have been most active.

Impressed with the seriousness of the economic situation, the National Catholic Educational Association, through a special committee, has issued a Syllabus on Social Problems, which is being furnished to the colleges in order to encourage the study of vital social questions. Such study is also promoted by the Social Action Department of the N. C. W. C., by supplying Catholic higher institutions with a monthly study outline.

The training and certification of teachers have been one of the foremost questions for some years. Diocesan normal schools, teachers' colleges and summer institutes have gained much ground, in spite of the financial depression. A significant development with regard to certification is a legal arrangement recently made in Pennsylvania, whereby teachers in Catholic schools are granted state certificates upon the fulfillment of the proper requirements. The bishop of each diocese is the responsible official with whom the Department of Public Instruction deals in this matter.

There are many other signs of co-operation between public and parochial school authorities in various states: for example, with regard to medical inspection, health surveys, manual training courses, recognition of diplomas, free textbooks, etc.

Catholic School System

According to the 1932-33 edition of the Directory of Catholic Colleges and Schools (N. C. W. C., Washington, D. C.), which presents the results of the biennial survey of the Catholic school system in the United States, there are now enrolled 2,598,669 students in 10,439 Catholic schools of all classifications. These figures represent a gain over the 1930 results of 2 per cent in the total number of schools and 2.4 per cent in the total number of students.

The classification of students is as follows: major seminaries, 7,632; preparatory seminaries, 10,863; men's colleges, 80,946; women's colleges, 24,980; normal schools, 9,781; secondary schools, 241,869; and elementary schools, 2,222,598, making the total attendance, as above stated, 2,598,669.

The total number of teachers engaged in the Catholic school system is 83,302, of whom 71,608 are religious, 10,917 lay, and 7,077 unclassified.

Catholic Press

According to the Catholic Press Directory (J. H. Meier, Chicago), there were 310 Catholic publications issued in the United States during 1932, classified as follows: dailies, 9; thrice-a-week, 1; semi-weekly, 3; weeklies, 113; semi-monthlies, 6; monthlies, 131; bi-monthlies, 13; quarterlies, 31; annuals, 2; biennials, 1. The combined circulation of 267 of these publications furnishing figures is given as 7,108,456. In addition to the 310, there is a large number of parish monthlies, school papers, college journals, fraternal organs, nationalistic and other organs.

Of the 310 publications listed, 225 are published in English and the remainder in various foreign languages. Included in the list also are two publications for the blind.

The principal agency of the Catholic press in the United States is the N. C. W. C. News Service, which, according to the 1932 report of the Most Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, episcopal chairman of the N. C. W. C. Press Department, supplies practically every important Catholic weekly paper published in the United States—70 in all—with a complete news, feature, editorial and pictorial service. In addition, the N. C. W. C. News Service goes to Catholic publications printed in fourteen foreign countries. This service, which is supported in part by the archbishops and bishops of the United States as one of the principal departments of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, is supplied through a headquarters staff of experienced newspaper men aided by paid correspondents in several cities in the United States and in the principal centers of Europe, Canada, Mexico, Australia, and South America.

Practically all Catholic publishers of newspapers or periodicals are members of the Catholic Press Association of the United States, a voluntary association of approved publishers of newspapers, journals, magazines, and other periodicals published in the United States under Catholic auspices. The C. P. A. maintains a News Service Bureau, a Literature Bureau, an Advertising Bureau, and a Circulation Vigilance Committee, all under the executive board of the association.

Missions

The American Board of Catholic Missions has charge of the missionary work of the Catholic Church in the United States. This board administers the funds contributed by parish and diocesan organizations toward home missions. Meeting in Chicago at the headquarters of the Catholic Church Extension Society in November, 1932, the board allotted $308,234.71 to missionary dioceses and missionary activities in different parts of the United States and its possessions. His Eminence, George Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, is president of the executive board. At the 27th annual meeting of the Catholic Church Extension Society, held in Chicago, November 22, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. William D. O'Brien, president of the society, reported the collection in the last fiscal year of $1,059,651.94. Of this amount, 50 per cent found its way to the impoverished missions of the South and West. The remainder was invested for the benefit of annuitants. Monsignor O'Brien completed his twenty-fifth year with the society during the present year.

The Board of Catholic Indian Missions, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., has special charge of missionary help for needy Indian and Negro missions. Its director is the Rt. Rev. Msgr. William Hughes.

For the foreign missions work, the representative organization in the United States is the Pontifical Society for the Propagation of the Faith. This is the official organization of the Holy See. Its headquarters is in New York City, and its national director is Rt. Rev. Msgr. William Quinn. The organization has branches in practically all the 105 dioceses, each headed by a diocesan director.

The 1931 report of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith shows total receipts amounting to $1,056,-084.50.

The work of the home and foreign missions is also aided financially and otherwise by many organizations, religious and lay. The actual missionary work is carried on by religious communities of men and women.

The estimated amount of money contributed annually for the last ten years by the Catholics of the United States to home missions is $2,000,000; that contributed annually to foreign missions, $3,500,000.

National Catholic Welfare Conference

The Conference is administered for the archbishops and bishops of the country by an administrative committee of seven of their number elected at the annual meeting of the bishops.

This year the general meeting was held on November 16-17. In addition to the resolution pledging cooperation with the National Citizens Committee of the Welfare and Relief Mobilization, previously mentioned, the 1932 meeting of the bishops passed a resolution condemning the "increasing flood of immoral and unmoral books, periodicals and pamphlets" and asking organized protest against such corrupting reading and picture matter; and another resolution which called upon the faithful to utilize to advantage the increasing amount of leisure time at their disposal, to avoid demoralizing entertainments, and to increase their religious zeal. (See the December, 1932, issue of Catholic Action, official organ of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.)

The Cardinal Hayes Literature Committee of New York City is an outstanding and growing influence in this field. Its object is to select books that are worth reading, thus endeavoring to carry out the Holy Father's desire that constructive measures be taken to remedy the disastrous effects of the bad literature that is at present vitiating the minds and morals of the world. (See p. 15.)

Social Legislation

Catholics continued last year to oppose bills introduced in Congress seeking to amend the criminal code so as to remove restrictions on the dissemination of birth prevention information and instruments. Catholic opposition was presented through representatives of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, including the National Councils of Catholic Men and Women and affiliated organizations.

The publications of the National Catholic Welfare Conference dealing with the problems of mental deficiency, sterilization and birth control, as displayed in the exhibit of the Third International Congress of Eugenics, held in New York, August 21-23, have been made a permanent exhibit of the organization of the International Congress of Eugenics. Among the publications in the N. C. W. C. exhibit are: Inheritance of Mental Defect, by Dr. Ulrich A. Hauber; Moral Aspects of Sterilization, by the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, director of the Department of Social Action, N. C.

W. C.; Social Care of the Mentally Deficient, by Dr. Charles Bernstein; Eugenical Sterilization in the Laws of the States, by William F. Montavon, director of the N. C. W. C. Legal Department; Birth Control, by the Rev. Dr. John M. Cooper, of the Catholic University of America; and a series on the question of birth control prepared by the N. C. W. C.

World Peace

The hope that the nations of the world will take effective measures to reduce armaments and thus promote international peace was expressed on behalf of the National Catholic Welfare Conference by the Most Rev. Edward J. Hanna, Archbishop of San Francisco and chairman of the Administrative Committee, N. C. W. C., in a letter which was read at the session of the Union Catholique d'Etudes Internationales in Geneva, Switzerland, on Sunday, February 7.

A resolution endorsed by 25,000,000 Catholic women, pleading for "an appreciable reduction of armaments," was presented to the Disarmament Conference. Joining in this petition were the National Council of Catholic Women, forty of its diocesan units, and many affiliated organizations. Miss Mary G. Hawks, president of the National Council of Catholic Women, and Miss Anna Dill Gamble, member of the Joint Peace Committee of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, attended the conference and joined in the presentation of the resolution referred to.

The Catholic Association for International Peace, headquarters at 1812 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington, D. C., has published to date a number of pamphlets.

Catholic University of America

During the year, a pontifical society, known as "Friends of the Catholic University of America," was organized in sixty-seven dioceses to aid in financing the work of that institution. Each year there is taken up in the 105 dioceses a general collection for the university. Last year this collection amounted to $450,000.

The Catholic University of America is the first pontifical university to be established in the English-speaking world since the Protestant Reformation. It is located in Washington, D. C., and maintains both graduate and undergraduate schools. It is a member of the Association of American Universities.

Thirty-two religious houses are located on the University campus. Most of these are houses of study for members of the orders represented.

Eucharistic Congress

An event of world-wide importance in which a large number of the American Catholic episcopate, clergy and lay people took part was the 31st International Eucharistic Congress, held in Dublin, Ireland, June 22-26. More than 1,000,000 Catholics participated in the concluding ceremony—the procession of the Blessed Sacrament and final Benediction service. From the United States, upward of sixty pilgrimages, numbering 20,000 American Catholics, attended the Congress. In the American representation were twenty-eight cardinals, archbishops and bishops of the American hierarchy. The Most Rev. Joseph Schrembs, Bishop of Cleveland, and protector in the United States of the Priests Eucharistic League, was in charge of the American section of the Congress.

Catholic Radio Broadcasts

Catholic agencies continued to utilize the radio in a wide variety of broadcasting programs. For the most part these programs were devoted to an exposition of the Catholic religion. The National Council of Catholic Men, a branch of the Lay Organizations Department of the N. C. W. C., continued its weekly broadcast of the Catholic Hour over the facilities of the National Broadcasting Company through its affiliated stations, varying in number from forty-nine to fifty-five throughout the year.

Catholic speakers also participated in the Columbia Broadcasting System's "Church of the Air" Sunday broadcasts. Catholic Truth societies, the Knights of Columbus, and other groups sponsored local broadcasts in a number of cities throughout the country. Several Catholic colleges and universities broadcast regularly educational programs. A pioneer broadcasting station is WLWL, conducted under the auspices of the Paulist Fathers in New York City. The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of the Shrine of the Little Flower, Detroit, Mich., has delivered a series of sermons dealing with social questions during the past two years.

George Washington Bicentennial

Catholic organizations, recalling George Washington's recognition of religion as the cornerstone and mainstay of the nation, joined wholeheartedly, both nationally and locally, in civic and social undertakings in celebration of the bicentennial.

Catholic Attitude Toward Public Questions

Indicative of the Catholic attitude on current public questions are resolutions adopted at the annual conventions of the National Councils of Catholic Men and Women. Some of the resolutions considered at the conventions named were: reconstructing the social order, in conformity with the program of Pope Pius XI; United States foreign policy, asking cooperation of all Catholic organizations in the development of a national policy of justice and charity toward the nations of the world; peace, asking for a just agreement for the simultaneous diminution of armaments among governments; economic problems, pledging the cooperation of all Catholic agencies in relieving the distress of the present economic crisis; unemployment and leisure, asking that every possible aid be given to relieve the unemployed and their families and advocating such use of leisure time occasioned by unemployment as will advance the spiritual and cultural upbuilding of the unemployed; individual and state rights and their relation to federal government, urging study of governmental relations through study clubs, lectures, radio, etc.; immigration, asking a more charitable and considerate attitude toward our alien population; Newman clubs, recognizing the importance of this agency in college life and urging cooperation with such where they exist; Catholics in state institutions, recommending a study of local, state and national institutions with a view to ascertaining the number of inmates and aiding their spiritual welfare; objectionable advertising, protesting the subtle attack on the innate dignity of womanhood and the undermining of the Christian ideal by certain types of commercial advertising; Federal Department of Education, expressing opposition to the creation of a Federal Department of Education with a secretary in the Cabinet; also opposition to the general principle of federalization; protecting youth, urging increased activity in guarding against salacious literature; stage and screen, asking Catholics to refrain from patronizing unclean and immoral exhibitions of the stage and screen and urging cooperation of all affiliated bodies in protesting against any misuse of these important factors in the recreational life of the people; Mexico and Spain, deploring the persecution of the Church in Mexico and Spain and extending sympathy and moral support to Catholics in both countries.

THE JEWISH FIELD

HARRY SCHNEIDERMAN

Editor, The American Jewish Year Book

THE field of Jewish interests and activities comprehends much more than strictly religious matters, for the Jews in the United States have numerous organizations for the maintenance of an entire network of educational, social, and philanthropic agencies. American Jews are also deeply interested in the welfare of their brethren abroad, and a larger number are watching and aiding the efforts now being made to rebuild, in Palestine, the national home of the Jewish people.

During 1932, economic conditions in the United States were such as to compel the Jewish community to apply by far the greater part of its energies to the solution of its own domestic problems, including those of continuing the activities, and, in some extreme cases, preventing the dissolution, of institutions and agencies which had been created by the community in previous years. American Jewry was prevented, therefore, from taking as active an interest in its sister communities overseas as in former years, especially so far as material aid was concerned.

Extend Help to Brethren in Other Lands

And yet, harassed as they were by their own difficulties, the Jews of America maintained to a measurable extent their sense of solidarity with their brethren in other countries, to whom they extended their sympathy and such material aid as their drastically reduced means made possible. They watched with interest events affecting their brethren in many countries, especially Palestine, Poland, and Roumania and, perhaps for the first time in generations, they followed, with considerable anxiety, events in Germany which appeared to portend misfortune for the Jews of that country.

In spite of the great difficulty in raising funds, the various societies interested in promoting one or another phase of Zionist work or Palestine development did not succumb to apathy and inaction but continued their chosen tasks as well as they could with the reduced means at their disposal. Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization, was very active during the year.

What was probably an unusually favorable result was achieved by the Jewish National Fund. A report of that agency for the six months from October 1, 1931, to April 1, 1932, showed a total collected of $162,525, compared with almost $200,000 for the same period a year before. In January, 1932, at a dinner in New York City in celebration of thirtieth anniversary of the Jewish National Fund, it was reported that during the three decades American Jews had contributed five of the sixteen million dollars paid into the Fund, which had been used to purchase 320,000 dunams (about 74,000 acres) of land in Palestine for the Jewish people.

Non-Jews Pledge Aid to Zionist Movement

Non-Jews continued to show a lively interest in Palestine matters. The most important step thus far in organizing non-Jewish sympathizers with Jewish aspirations as regards Palestine was the dinner held in Washington, D. C., on January 18, 1932, attended by eighty guests, including Vice-President Curtis, members of the Cabinet, Senators and Representatives, who decided to organize an "American Palestine Committee" for the furtherance of the restoration of Palestine as the Jewish National Homeland, and the dissemination of accurate information as to the progress of the upbuilding work in the Holy Land.

Though Palestine occupied the chief place in the interest of American Jewry in overseas communities, the situation of Jews in other countries was not ignored. Thus, for a few weeks in November and December, 1931, our community was stirred by a series of anti-Jewish outbreaks in Poland, which, starting at the University of Cracow, spread to other universities, and even beyond the bounds of these institutions. The news reports led many to form the opinion that these disorders would not have spread as far and as rapidly as they did if the Polish authorities had made more rigorous efforts to localize them in the beginning, and charges of weakness and vacillation against the Polish government were made by sections of the Jewish press and by a number of organizations.

American Jews Pleased with German Elections

In view of the well-known fact that the program of the National Socialist Party in Germany is heavily charged with threats against the peace and security of the Jews of that country, the interest of American Jews in Germany, which was greatly increased because of the tremendous vote polled by the National Socialists in the Reichstag elections in September, 1930, became even more intense because of events during the period under review. Interest reached a high pitch during the campaign which included the two elections for President of the Reich on March 13 and April 10, 1932. The re-election of Marshal von Hindenburg was greeted with satisfaction not only by American Jews but by Americans generally. The press hailed the outcome as a triumph of sanity and common sense.

Events affecting scattered Jewish communities in Mexico, Cuba, Guatemala, and one or two other Latin-American countries also attracted some of the attention of American Jews. But, in spite of a general apathy resulting from the reduced ability of American Jewry to be of help, the wretched situation of the Jewish communities of Poland, Roumania, and other European countries was not altogether lost sight of, and the national as well as the local leaders of the Joint Distribution Committee strove to gather funds to alleviate this situation. Campaigns were held in many cities throughout the country. On March 27, 1932, a meeting of the National Council of the Joint Distribution Committee was held in New York City, attended by three hundred delegates from all over the country. The national committee pledged itself to continue the work of rehabilitation begun shortly after the outbreak of the World War.

Opinion Divided on Desirability of World Congress

During the spring of 1932, there was much discussion in the community of the proposal of the American Jewish Congress for convening a world Jewish conference in preparation for the establishment of a World Jewish Congress as the only adequate form for the presentation of Jewish problems. The proposal was opposed by the American Jewish Committee and there was a rather unpleasant controversy regarding it, in the course of which there were indications that there was a distinct lack of unanimity on the subject. The conference was, nevertheless, held in Geneva, Switzerland, the American Jewish Congress being the only American organization represented.

By several organs of the Jewish press, this discussion was regarded as indicative of an undesirable division in Jewish community leadership. From some quarters came the suggestion for the federation of all important national causes into one central Jewish agency; from other quarters came the suggestion that a national council for planning the function of the organizations to prevent duplication, overlapping and working at cross purposes, was sorely needed.

Discussion along these lines had also been stimulated by a suggestion made by Judge Horace Stern of Philadelphia at the Council Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Judge Stern's suggestion, briefly stated, was that in each congregation the members be divided into groups each of which would interest itself in a special aspect of Jewish community life. In the opinion of the author of the plan, its effectuation would restore the synagogue to its former position as the center of all Jewish communal effort, thus making the synagogue a more vital institution.

Added interest in this and other plans was aroused because they appeared to aim at a more dependable and steady income for national Jewish agencies, and the need for such an income, derived on a broad basis from a larger number of individuals, was being felt very keenly by many of these agencies, because of the economic crisis.

Organize to Combat the "Religious Depression"

Despite the depression, however, the various central religious bodies were very active. Resolved to combat the "religious depression," the Union of American Hebrew Congregations conducted conferences in various parts of the country, went on organizing its member congregations into regional unions, and promoted closer association between the Jews in cities having organized congregations and small scattered settlements of Jews in the vicinity of such cities.

The United Synagogue of America also held regional meetings and took other steps to maintain and stimulate the interest of its members, and to increase the influence of the organization. At its annual convention in May, 1932, the organization's director, Rabbi Samuel M. Cohen, reported that the income for the preceding year had not only been sufficient for the current expenditures but also had made possible a reduction of the deficit carried forward from previous years. The United Synagogue had also gained the adherence of forty-three additional congregations, and two new regional branches had been organized, one for the Pacific Coast and the other for the New England states.

Reduced Giving Hits Educational Agencies

In the struggle for survival, as it were, of Jewish communal agencies, those devoting themselves to Jewish education appeared to be among the most acute sufferers. In a report submitted in October, 1931, to the National Conference of Jewish Social Service, Dr. Alexander M. Dushkin, Executive Director of the Joint Board of Education of Chicago, stated that these agencies had been compelled to reduce their budgets drastically, and that those which are not affiliated with a local welfare fund or a federation were in a wretched plight.

The Jewish community was shocked when, on June 6, 1932, at the eighth annual commencement exercises of the Hebrew Union College School for Teachers, in New York City, Dr. Julian Morgenstern, president of the Hebrew Union Colleges, announced that the school was to be discontinued because of lack of funds. The school, which trained young men and women for teaching in religious schools of reform congregations, had been in operation for nine years, during which time it had graduated 176 students and had had an aggregate enrollment of more than 2,000 in its classes.

That the Jews of the United States spend over $6,000,000 annually for Jewish education was one of the statements made by Albert B. Schoolman, president of the National Council for Jewish Education, at a joint meeting of the Council with the National Conference of Jewish Social Service, held in Philadelphia, in May, 1932.

Charitable Institutions Forced to Retrench

The pinch of poverty was felt also by the strictly charitable institutions. In the face of increasing demands upon their services, their incomes suffered drastic reductions. They were therefore compelled to restrict their ministrations to those suffering from the greatest want, and to suspend, in most cases, such constructive tasks as they had assumed in years of plenty. Even orphanages were faced with the necessity of making budget reductions which, it was feared, might affect the health of their wards. The unprecedented economic conditions were reflected also in the reports of hospitals which were compelled, in spite of reduced revenues, to give free care to a far greater number of patients than ever before.

That these conditions demand a revaluation of our community activities and a consolidation of community resources was the opinion expressed by Morris D. Waldman, secretary of the American Jewish Committee, in an address before the National Conference of Jewish Social Service in May, 1932. Mr. Waldman expressed the view that the care of dependents was the duty of the State, that with the cessation of immigration there was diminishing logic for specifically Jewish material relief organizations, and that the "only valid basis of Jewish community organization was the preservation and promotion of the essentially Jewish values."

Though money stringency slowed down, it did not altogether stop, the communal machinery. The leaders of the various religious, educational and charitable agencies realized that they must be kept functioning and be prepared to resume their normal services when the crisis is past. The importance of maintaining the Jewish educational institutions was especially appreciated, and in many parts of the country efforts to extend existing educational services were made.

Discrimination in Employment a Major Problem

A subject which frequently came up for discussion at goodwill seminars was the widespread practice on the part of employers, especially in industrial centers, to refuse employment to Jews, without regard to their fitness or ability. Owing no doubt to the intensified struggle for existence of the past several years, this practice has come to affect a far greater number of Jewish employment seekers, with the result that it has now come to be recognized by communal leaders and organizations as a problem of tremendous seriousness. The subject was discussed at a number of public meetings of Jewish organizations. It was analyzed from the viewpoints of the economist and the professional social worker in an address delivered in May, 1982, at the convention of the National Conference of Jewish Work by Dr. I. M. Rubinow, Secretary of the National Conference on Jewish Employment which was organized in the winter of 1980-81.

The vexatious question of the limitation of the enrollment of Jews in medical schools was also widely discussed during the year. That there is a fundamental difference of approach toward this problem among American Jews was evidenced by the fact that, at a convention of the American Jewish Congress in October, 1981, that organization reached the conclusion that solution of this problem lies in the establishment of a medical school primarily for Jewish students, whereas at the Annual Meeting of the American Jewish Committee, held in December, the Executive Committee of that body expressed the opinion that in view of the overcrowded condition of the medical profession the solution lies rather in better vocational guidance for Jewish young men and women wishing to embark on a professional career.

Besides these two continuing manifestations of an anti-Jewish attitude, other sporadic incidents also gave rise to discussion during the year. For the most part, these were the kind of incidents which have long been familiar to the Jewish community, and most of them aroused only local comment.

THE PROTESTANT FIELD OF RELIGION

HERMAN C. WEBER

Editor of the Yearbook of American Churches

THE situation in the Protestant field of religion may be succinctly gathered from many angles in the preceding section of the YEARBOOK as they are presented there by acknowledged experts in specific areas. The significant contribution of the cooperative force of Protestantism, as symbolized by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, is tersely presented in a succeeding section. (See pages 219 to 226.) Further light on church membership and church finances may be found in the statistical section beginning on page 297.

What remains for the writer to offer in this place is a general picture of the adjustment of organized Protestantism to the peculiar difficulties of a depression year, and to the outstanding events or problems which deserve a focusing of thought.

In a number of respects 1931, the first year of a new decade, suggested a new prospect for organized religion in the United States. There were signs that a new spirit was entering into the general attitude of church people and a new marshaling of leadership was in process. Attendance at church services and certainly at church meetings of a general character was noticeably improved. The interest of newspapers in the thinking and activities of church groups seemed greatly increased. Religion seemed to be obtaining some attention as "news."

Church Assemblies

The promise of 1931 has not been very much advanced in 1932. This may be a temporary condition. The leadership expected to emerge has not yet appeared. Opportunities have been numerous, for many of the larger denominational bodies had their important general meetings in 1932 and provided the opportunity for new religious statesmanship or for challenging leadership. The Presbyterians, both in the U. S. A. and U. S. branches, the Baptists, the Dutch Reformed, and the Disciples had their annual meetings. The Methodists held their quadrennial conference; the Reformed Church in the U. S. its triennial; and two of the larger groups of the Lutherans, the United Lutheran Church and the American Lutheran Conference, their biennial meetings.

Over nearly all these meetings rested the pall of the depression. There was not so much discouragement as very great conservatism with reference to policies and projects. In some bodies there were forebodings as to the future of missionary work. In others, a well defined movement toward united promotional work and away from the competition of agencies was halted or discontinued. This was especially true of the Methodist Episcopal Church which dismissed its World Service staff and returned promotion to the various agencies involved for the next quadrennium. An effort was made quite generally to combat the depression of spirit by an emphasis on evangelism, and to some degree this effort was helpful and productive. A movement begun in the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and paralleled in other bodies, for the observance in October of a week of Penitence and Prayer met with substantial, though not overwhelming success.

The Election

One element of importance to the churches during the year was the national election and the emphasis placed during the course of the campaign and its preliminary agitations on the retention or disposal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Church assemblies which met during the year favored in general the retention of the Constitutional prohibition of the liquor traffic. The laity of the churches was not so sure of its mind in this matter and this dissociation between pastors and people may have still further repercussions in the Protestant communion. The discussions of prohibition during the past two years so far as they have been extreme or reckless or selfish and on the plane of ill will on either side have probably opened wider the back doors of the churches for the quiet exit of those who have been confused or alienated by the prevalent agitation. Several of the larger denominations report their peak transfers of members to inactive lists. The additions to the churches of their young people have been larger, however, than in the preceding two years.

The thinking of the Church has not been particularly significant, as appears from the article by Professor Van Dusen on "Theology in 1932." The change of emphasis is, of course, highly important. The younger men in the ministry in most bodies have been profoundly interested in the attitude of their leaders toward the economic questions brought into sharp focus by the depression, but their thinking has not yet been crystallized by any significant intellectual leadership.

The Union Trend

One development of the year was an apparent intensification of sectarianism and denominationalism. This development parallels the upward swing of nationalism in American politics. The projects for union, even the most promising ones, have been quiescent throughout the year. The leaders in charge are making a virtue of caution and patience, and the general sentiment in their respective general church meetings has lacked enthusiasm for any rapid progress toward organic unions. A recent balloting conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research revealed a strong sentiment in a number of bodies which have been leaders in advances toward union in favor of some form of federal union rather than organic.

An outstanding event of the year was the release of the conclusions of the laymen's inquiry into foreign missions. This is referred to in detail on page 94. The reaction to the report raised as many questions about theology as about missionary technique, and the very wide reading of the report assured by the preliminary publicity promised a disturbance in Protestantism which might profoundly affect its attitudes and relationships.

A stir in Protestant circles was caused by the cross-country tour of the representatives of the so-called Oxford Groups, or First Century Christian Fellowship. Its reported impact on university and English Church circles in Great Britain attracted wide attention. Some observers suggested that this might be the revivifying church movement which is felt to be due in the second post-war decade.

SURVEY OF HOME MISSIONS

WILLIAM R. KING

(The author has been Executive Secretary of the Home Missions Council since 1927; formerly Secretary of the Board of National Missions, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., and prior to that Pastor of First Presbyterian Church of St. Louis.)

THERE are constituent to the Home Missions Council, whose aim is to "promote fellowship, conference and cooperation among Christian organizations doing missionary work in the United States, Canada, and their dependencies," thirty-two boards, or societies, of twenty-five denominations. These groups are variously called, boards of home missions, or American missions, home mission or missionary society, general mission board, church extension board or church erection society, national council or national missions. In some groups home and foreign missions are administered by one board of directors; in others, the board is divided into departments for home mission work only. Men's and women's home mission boards have been merged into one board in some instances, in others the woman's work is administered by a separate woman's home missionary society. The Board of Missions and the Woman's Board of the Evangelical Church were recently merged, and under the new constitution the first joint meeting was held in 1932.

Extent of Work

The field of home mission work varies. The Board for Home Missions, Evangelical Synod of North America, during 1932, gave financial aid to 125 churches, conducted work among Ozark mountaineers, on Madeline Island in Lake Superior, at the Immigrant and Seaman's Mission in Baltimore, and a St. Louis city mission; in the oyster and shrimp canneries at Biloxi (where a nine-week strike threatened the welfare of the people as well as the development of missionary work), and is responsible for eight points in the Ozarks, where it recently built a Community House in Shannondale County.

The home mission work of the General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren included aid to about forty-eight churches in the support of their ministers, and to twenty-five in church buildings; the largest single appropriation went to an industrial school in Greene County, Virginia. The Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church shares in the support of 3,000 home missionary workers in all parts of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Dominican Republic. The Congregational Church Building Society aided churches in thirty-three states and one in the District of Columbia. The Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., maintains 7,781 enterprises with a missionary personnel of 4,070, which includes maintenance of churches, mission Sunday schools, community stations, schools and hospitals, evangelism, financial aid to churches for building purposes, development of an educational program in the field of social and industrial relations, in the United States, Alaska, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Dominican Republic, among many races and groups.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society includes in its missionary budget English-speaking and Indian missions, city and foreign-speaking missions, social service and rural work, colporteur and chapel cars, and evangelism. Its Latin-American Department includes work in Mexico, El Salvador and Nicaragua in Central America, Cuba, Porto Rico and Haiti. The Executive Committee of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. shares in the support of 603 home missionaries in 674 organized enterprises.

Board Organization

The work of the Congregational Home Missionary Society is now in process of merger with the missionary activities of the Christian denomination. All voting members of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches have been made voting members of the Congregational Home Missionary Society during the period of their membership in the General Council. Plans for closer union in the Southeast covering territory south of the Potomac and east of the Mississippi are going forward satisfactorily.

At the April, 1932, meeting of the American Friends Board of Missions of the Five Years Meeting of Friends in America, the reorganization of its board was effected for the coming five years.

The number of departments of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church was reduced from four to three, by orders of its General Conference, the Department of Evangelism being discontinued. The responsibility for the maintenance of Wesley Foundation work was transferred to the Board of Education. The Bureau of Architecture, formerly a joint bureau of the Board of Education and the Board of Home Missions, was made a Bureau of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension. Dr. Edward Delor Kohlstedt was re-elected Secretary of the Board of Home Missions for a term of four years, his title being changed from that of Corresponding Secretary to Executive Secretary. The Board's direct responsibility in the field of promotion was increased, and the handling of designated gifts changed.

The Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. in June, 1932, revised its organization, discontinuing former divisions and departments. It is now divided into two departments, under the general oversight of the General Secretary, as follows: (1) Department of Missionary Operation, which includes mission work on the field together with the Board's work in the fields of evangelism, social and industrial relations, rural and city church service. (2) Department of Missionary Support, including treasurer's office, promotional work, and building aid work of the Board.

The General Council of the United Church of Canada which met in September, 1932, recommended the reduction of the Board of Home Missions from thirty-six members to twenty, its Executive from twenty members to ten. In addition to these, fourteen Superintendents of Missions continue to be corresponding members of each body. The Council also advised that by June, 1935, three of these Superintendents be dispensed with. The Sub-executive of fourteen representatives was eliminated by the Council.

In the Executive Committee of Home Missions, Presbyterian Church in the U. S., upon the resignation of Dr. S. Leslie Morris after thirty years of distinguished service, the office of Executive Secretary was merged with that of General Secretary, to which Dr. Homer McMillan was elected. The supervision of Negro work was placed under the General Secretary after the death of the Secretary of the Negro Department. The administrative and educational expenses of this Executive Committee have been reduced nearly thirty per cent in two years.

Anniversaries and Denominational Meetings

The American Baptist Home Mission Society celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of its work by a great meeting in San Francisco, in July, 1932. The anniversary was celebrated throughout the year and symbolized in a covered wagon which crossed the continent, beginning at Brockton, Mass. and finishing its journey in Oregon. The United Lutheran Church in America on November 6, 1932, celebrated the 300th anniversary of the death of Gustavus Adolphus, the hero of the Reformation. The fiftieth anniversary of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church South was commemorated in 1932 by the publication of a history covering the first fifty years of the Board, written by H. M. King, the architect of the Board.

An International Convention was held in Indianapolis of the Disciples group in October, 1932, with an attendance of about 11,000. The first Quadrennial Missionary Convention of the Evangelical Church was held at Elkhart, Ind., September 28 to October 2, 1932. The Quadrennial Home Missions Conference of the Evangelical Synod was held July 5-8, 1932.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church met at Atlantic City in May, 1932, and passed legislation concerning designated gifts which will have a direct effect not only upon the method of raising funds but also upon the administration of home missionary work. It also discontinued a central promotional office and transferred promotional responsibility to the boards. The Board of American Missions of the United Presbyterian Church held its second Home Mission Congress in Pittsburgh, May 20-23, 1932. Several denominational home boards continue to set apart annually a Home Mission Day.

Home Mission Accomplishments

Generally speaking, home mission boards in 1982 were forced to adopt a policy of curtailment and withdrawal rather than expansion of work, yet progress is reported in some fields.

The American Missionary Association and the American Baptist Home Mission Society report that their institutions for Negroes have been brought to higher educational standards. The Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for the Southern States has given an "A" rating for Talladega College in Alabama.

Baptist work among the Indians of the West has resulted in an unusually large number of Indians who have made profession of Christianity and united with mission churches. The Methodist Episcopal Church South reports a large increase in membership among the Iowa and Comanche Indians. Their work among Mexicans and among Cubans in Florida has been fruitful in revivals and accessions. The Christian Reformed Board of Missions reports a few new fields opened in the United States, their work in Canada has been sustained, and their work among Indians is progressing.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society reports increased attendance at services for foreign-speaking groups. There were membership accessions totaling 3,193 in churches aided by the Congregational Home Missionary Society, and 2,803 were received upon confession of faith. The mission points of the Church of the Brethren increased about eight per cent in membership.

The Board of American Missions of the United Lutheran Church reconditioned its mission properties in Porto Rico damaged by the hurricane, and rebuilt a mission house on an Indian Reservation at Rocky Boy, Montana. An increasing number of their congregations are sponsoring a home mission parish. This Board approved definite policies on work among the Jews—that evangelization of Jewish neighbors should be recognized and discharged by every congregation as a part of its regular parish work. Similar responsibility was laid upon their congregations with reference to work among Italians and among Negroes. A comprehensive survey of missionary, educational and administrative operations in Canada, from Montreal to Edmonton and Regina, was undertaken.

In 1982 the Board of Home Missions of the United Church of Canada inaugurated a new series of papers for the non-Anglo-Saxons in Canada. Weeklies are published in Finnish, Italian and Hungarian languages and a bi-monthly for Ukrainians, which include a section in English for reading by the young people. Their committee on rural work in 1982 centered their survey efforts on the territory near Hamiota, Manitoba. Their relief committee alleviated distress in the dried-out areas in Saskatchewan. Ministers have been appointed to care for the influx of settlers to Northern Saskatchewan and the Peace River area.

Finances

The reports from constituent boards on their financial situation can be divided into three groups, namely, (1) financial year closed with all current obligations paid in full and a surplus; (2) endeavoring to maintain a balanced budget; (3) receipts have fallen from 5 per cent, 25 per cent and 30 per cent below expectations with resulting deficits. The majority of replies come within the second and third groups. The American Baptist Society reported that its fiscal year closed with all obligations paid in full and a surplus for previous indebtedness incurred. Deficits reported by boards, the fiscal years of which generally ended in the spring or early fall of 1932, vary from $20,000 to $560,000. This decrease in income has affected all types of expenditures, and necessitated salary cuts to field and office workers of 5 per cent, 25 per cent and 30 per cent.

Some of the constituent groups guard against possible deficits by denominational rulings requiring that the budget shall never exceed expected payments on quotas from their state or field units after an every-member canvass. For instance, at a joint meeting of the House of Bishops, and the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church in May, 1932, the tentative budget for 1933 (amounting to $700,000 less than that authorized by its General Convention) was considered, and the amount appropriated for domestic missionary work for 1933 amounted to $132,000 less than that appropriated for the same work in 1932.

The Executive Committee of Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. was instructed by its General Assembly to keep expenditures within the assured income, and in order to do so decided to conduct all home mission work on a cash basis. All appropriations to presbyteries and missions have been made conditional. There are no guaranteed salaries, either for office workers or field workers. In this way all work will be maintained as far as possible and division made among the workers of the actual receipts.

The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church South under its constitution is not permitted to go into debt except for annuities. During the depression it has adopted the policy of not pressing churches, to whom loans have been given, to the point where they cannot carry on the regular program of the church.

The Department of Church Erection of the United Christian Missionary Society reports that, while collections on principal on their loans to churches (totaling over $3,000,000) fell 50 per cent, and collections of interest on loans decreased 25 per cent, not a church has turned back its property or repudiated its debt. This Department has recently initiated a policy of helping churches preserve their building funds.

Through bank failures thousands of dollars raised for building purposes by churches have been lost. The Board is now accepting funds for safe-keeping and also for use in its work until such time as they are needed by the churches making deposits. One Board of Home Missions is endeavoring to work out a mortgage redemption plan with an insurance company, whereby it can reduce notes in banks and relieve its financial situation.

Organization Personnel

In a few boards the policy of retrenchment has reduced the number of office and field personnel. Rev. Lucius O. Baird, after forty-two years of home missionary service, because of age limitation retired as superintendent of Congregational work in Alaska, Northern Idaho and Washington. The Department of Church Erection of the United Christian Missionary Society called a new assistant secretary-treasurer to its staff, William T. Percy. In January, 1932, Rev. Goodrich A. Fenner entered upon his duties as Secretary for Rural Work, Department of Christian Social Service of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Cooperative Work

About one-half of the constituent boards share in cooperative home mission work, sometimes through interdenominational agencies, such as the Missionary Education Movement, the Committee on Cooperation in Latin America, the Federal Council, the Home Missions Council and Council of Women for Home Missions, the Commission on Racial Relations, the Interracial Commission, the Board of Christian Work in Santo Domingo, the John Milton Foundation, International Council of Religious Education, Interdenominal Council on Spanish-speaking Work

A few of the projects supported in this way are the interdenominational directors at government Indian schools, the publication of interdenominational literature, and the interdenominational religious work at Hoover Dam, Boulder City, Nevada. The Board of Home Missions of the United Church of Canada cooperated with five other Protestant churches in 1932 in providing religious services for men in government construction camps. Denominational field executives have formed voluntary interdenominational local and state groups, such as state home missions councils and the Council of Religion at Radburn, N. J.

Sometimes two or more denominations contribute a proportionate share by direct appropriation to a particular district or state toward a local project, such as the support of a missionary, or a Larger Parish, or Federated Church. Home mission boards help to promote interdenominationally the observance of Rural Life Sunday (the fifth Sunday after Easter) and cooperate in interdenominational summer schools for town and country pastors.

Coming Events

The Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church is making preparations for a Council of Cities meeting in Detroit, February 1 and 2, 1933, and also for the Jason Lee Centennial which comes in 1934. The Executive Committee of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. is devoting 1932 to preparations for the evangelistic year in 1933. This evangelistic campaign, under the supervision of the General Assembly's Home Mission Committee, is designed to reach every church and institution in the Assembly with direct evangelistic service within twelve months.

THE CHURCHES AND MOTION PICTURES

WORTH MARION TIPPY

(The author, former pastor of Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, New York, is Executive Secretary of the Federal Council's Department of the Church and Social Service, founder and Executive Chairman of the Church Conference of Social Work, and a member of the Executive Committee of the International Conference of Social Work.)

INTEREST in motion pictures among the churches has grown steadily during the year. The concern of the churches is taking two forms: an overwhelming desire for better commercial pictures and a cleaner and more social-minded motion picture theatre; a growing use of the motion picture for religious purposes.

While there has been during the year an encouraging increase in the number of films having sound themes, dramatic continuity and high technical excellence, and also several exceptional photoplays, the industry still pours out a stream of films of such a low moral and artistic level that the tone of the church press, Catholic and Protestant alike, continues critical. This is equally true, moreover, of journals of opinion such as the New Republic and the dramatic writers of the daily press.

Better Films

Ever since the study of the Public Relations of the Motion Picture Industry by the Federal Council Research Department in 1930, and the unfortunate happenings in the Federal Council itself in 1929, the Protestant churches have not been able to get together on a concerted program for better films. A few religious periodicals, notably The Christian Century, The Baptist, Young Men, and Moral Welfare, have been issuing film estimate services, using mainly the National Film Estimate Service of Chicago, except that the Y. M. C. A. does its own reviewing. These services seem to have met a need and to have occasioned but little criticism. At least three councils of churches—New York, Detroit, and New Haven—are contemplating issuing film estimates to their constituents. The International Federation of Catholic Alumnae have been doing reviewing and issuing a service for ten years.

At present the Federal Council is studying organization for better films, the organization to rest back upon denominational boards of social service, religious education, and visual education, and allied inter-denominational agencies, such as the missionary councils and the Christian associations.

Religious Films

Parallel to these relations to the commercial motion picture has been a growing realization that in the photoplay religion has a powerful new agency for its own purposes. This has given rise to departments of visual education in church boards of education, home missions and foreign missions. The secretaries of these departments meet together in the Committee on Visual Education of the Missionary Education Movement for the production of educational films in these fields. As yet the narrow width (16mm) film is mainly used, but larger churches are beginning to install the regulation projectors, which are more expensive but more satisfactory in that they are better for larger auditoriums and allow the use of suitable commercial films.

As yet most films for church use are scenes pieced together from many sources. They are valuable but they lack the continuity and dramatic force such as will soon appear when production of religious films is farther along and it is possible to finance pictures depicting the religious spirit expressing itself in dramatic life situations.

The Religious Motion Picture Foundation, in New York City, established by the Harmon Foundation, collaborating with the denominational departments of visual education, and the Missionary Education Movement, produced a number of valuable films for church use during the year, among them "The Open Door," "Adventures in Understanding," "A Christian League of Nations," "Silver Bay Conference," "China Our Neighbor," "The American Indian," and "Children of New York."

Other producing companies in the religious field are Academy of Religious Arts, 718 West 8th St., Los Angeles; Cecil DeMille, Hollywood, now making films showing religious themes; International Film Foundation, 151 East 50th Street, New York, whose film "The Cry of the World" is just out; Peace Film Foundation, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, "Must War Be?"; John Wesley Film Foundation, New York. Several church boards of national missions, foreign missions, and Christian education are producing films for their purposes.

It is clear that, as the use of films by churches gets under way and as films of artistic merit are produced for religious purposes, the commercial industry must inevitably be affected.

The churches will naturally join with schools and organizations of women to secure non-commercial showings for children and families, in which youth can be protected from the evils of the present commercial film. Once the church begins to produce a larger number of satisfactory photoplays of its own, as it can do at much less than the cost of Hollywood films, the industry itself is likely to be influenced to produce a higher type of picture or lose patronage.

THE LAYMEN'S FOREIGN MISSIONS INQUIRY

BENSON Y. LANDIS

AMONG the events in the church world of 1982, undoubtedly one of the most outstanding and important was the report of the Commission of Appraisal of the Laymen's Foreign Missions Inquiry. The report was presented at a conference of representatives of boards and societies of foreign missions held at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York, November 18 and 19. Prior to that time it received widespread publicity and editorial comment in the newspapers of the entire nation. The report of the Commission of Appraisal is published in book form by Harper & Brothers under the title Re-Thinking Missions. The sub-title reads "A Laymen's Inquiry After One Hundred Years."

The Foreword of the book sketches the history of the inquiry. In January, 1980, a group of laymen of one religious body met to consider some of the critical situations in the foreign mission enterprise. This group was of the opinion that "a new and thoroughgoing study" of the purpose of missions, their basis of support and their methods of work was needed. Laymen of other bodies were invited to participate in the undertaking. Soon thirty-five lay persons, unofficially drawn from seven denominations, were organized to constitute the directors of the Laymen's Foreign Missions Inquiry.

Joint Efforts of Leaders in Seven Denominations

The denominations were Baptist (Northern), Congregational, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., Protestant Episcopal, Reformed Church in America, and United Presbyterian. It should be noted that the inquiry was entirely voluntary and unofficial. Numerous boards and interdenominational organizations gave it much informal cooperation, however.

The study was restricted to Japan, China, India, and Burma. The work to be done was further delimited as follows: First, there was to be a thorough collection of relevant data, and, second, there should be an appraisal of the facts so as to secure the widest possible intelligent discussion among those most concerned. The fact-finding work was entrusted to the Institute of Social and Religious Research, which sent three groups of experts to the Orient. The Commission of Appraisal then went to the Orient, aided and guided by the work of the fact-finding commissions.

The Commission of Appraisal was instructed to make an objective appraisal of activities, and to work out a program for today, all for the purpose of aiding laymen "to determine their attitude toward foreign missions." The members of the Commission of Appraisal were: Wm. Ernest Hocking, Chairman; Frederic Woodward, Vice-Chairman; Clarence A. Barbour; Edgar H. Betts; Arlo A. Brown; Charles P. Emerson; Mrs. Wm. Ernest Hocking; Henry S. Houghton; Rufus M. Jones; William P. Merrill; Albert L. Scott; Harper Sibley; Mrs. Harper Sibley; Henry C. Taylor; Ruth F. Woodsmall.

A summary of the findings is impossible in this brief sketch of the work of the Inquiry. The book Re-Thinking Missions must be consulted for that. The Commission said missions should not cease, but that far-reaching changes were obviously needed. The Commission frankly says that everything recommended and discussed had been at some time anticipated by some groups within the churches or the missions. The Commission proposed, for example, a single unit of administration, more rapid transfer of work to native responsibility, more concentration of effort, better trained and equipped missionaries, and increasing cooperation with other faiths.

Opinion Divided on the Aims of Missions

The discussion of the aims of missions as given in the early chapters has aroused considerable discussion, being opposed by some as too liberal and not sufficiently evangelical, and being warmly applauded by others. This discussion reveals plainly the varieties of religious philosophy among Protestants.

At this writing only preliminary consideration has been given to the report by the boards and societies administering the programs of work which were studied. The actions thus far taken emphasize that thorough study has not yet been possible. Some do not wish to commit themselves to any considerable extent until many of their missionaries have studied the report. Practically all the statements adopted welcome it and speak of it as a significant document; some describe it as "the most important contribution since the Jerusalem Conference."

"It should be read and studied by every Methodist," declares the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Society of Foreign Missions. "Constructive suggestions will be genuinely helpful," says the Baptist statement. The Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. presents a long list of recommendations which it specifically approves. The Methodists declare they are willing to increase cooperation immediately. A group of Congregationalists meeting informally has recommended to the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions of that church that its own policies should be shaped along the lines recommended by the commission of inquiry.

Exceptions of Several Boards Noted

On the other hand, various exceptions are noted. Some of these are openly on theological grounds. It is thought by some boards that the effect of newspaper publicity was "unhappy." Two others specifically oppose the statements of the aims and purposes of missions. One says it cannot take the position of looking forward to the continued coexistence of other religions, regards certain passages as "disturbing," and thinks the gospel is being adulterated by the report.

FRANK C. GOODMAN

Executive Secretary of the Federal Council's Radio Department

RADIO broadcasting has furnished an amazing new channel of communication for reaching the masses, whereby the teachings of the Church can be made known to the millions of unchurched people in America. In large cities many of the church federations conduct services from the broadcasting studios; in addition many stations broadcast by remote control church services in the same area. Recent surveys show that there are more services broadcast from church auditoriums of the country than from the studios of the broadcasting companies.

Radio and Church Attendance

Twenty-five church federations throughout America, from which reports have been received, agree that:

1. Radio services neither increase nor decrease church attendance.
2. Radio services do reach and influence persons unreached by the ordinary church services.
3. Radio services should be in-terdenominational and broadly inclusive of all types of Protestantism.

Cost of Broadcasting

As the majority of radio stations of the country are conducted on a commercial basis, there are no contracts to assure continuance of the services; but it is generally conceded in radio circles that the religious programs help to build an audience for the station offering its facilities for commercial purposes. The attitude of almost all radio stations is friendly to the church bodies, and a willingness to assist by granting facilities for religious broadcasting is manifested by the officials of almost all large stations of the country. The facilities of the radio chains are furnished free of charge and have an actual commercial value of over $1,000,000 per year. No compensation is paid to the clergymen who officiate in the radio services. The Federal Council and the church federations are not financially responsible for the expenses of the religious radio they sponsor, and contribute no part of their receipts to its maintenance.

Financial and Supporting Committees

In order to maintain programs worthy of national reception and to administer the Department of Religious Radio, approximately $95,000 was necessary during the year 1929. In 1930, the annual cost was reduced to $85,000, and in 1931 and 1932 it was further reduced to a sum not exceeding $60,000. The cost of national religious radio is provided by a comparatively small number of public-spirited Christian men who desire the continuance of this nation-wide ministry.

Individual finance groups of laymen are formed by the radio department for each program sponsored by the Federal Council to raise the necessary funds for the supporting musical programs and the administration of the Department of Religious Radio. It would not be possible to overestimate the interest and loyalty of these finance boards.

Chain Programs Sponsored by Federal Council

Since the year 1928, radio's contribution to the religious life of the people has greatly increased, due to the facilities of chain broadcasting. Tens of thousands of letters received from all parts of America indicate that these programs reach persons in all walks of life and are proving to be a spiritual force. There is also abundant testimony that these Sunday programs go into homes from which the influence of the Church has long been excluded.

The weekly religious radio periods for the twelve months of the year have been as follows:

- "THE HOUR OF WORSHIP".....From Nov. 1 to April 30
Dr. S. Parkes Cadman
Sunday, WEA and associated stations, 8:30 to 4:00 P.M.
- "NATIONAL YOUTH CONFERENCE".....From Nov. 1 to April 30
Dr. Daniel A. Poling
Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 4:30 to 5:00 P.M.
- "NATIONAL VESPERS"From Nov. 1 to April 30
Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick
Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 5:00 to 5:30 P.M.
- "NATIONAL SUNDAY FORUM"From May 1 to July 31
Dr. Ralph W. Sockman
Sunday, WEA and associated stations, 8:30 to 4:00 P.M.
- "FRIENDLY HOUR"From May 1 to July 31
Dr. J. Stanley Durkee
Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 4:30 to 5:00 P.M.
- "SABBATH REVERIES"From May 1 to July 31
Dr. Charles L. Goodell
Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 5:00 to 5:30 P.M.
- "NATIONAL SUNDAY FORUM"From Aug. 1 to Oct. 31
Dr. Frederick H. Knubel and Dr. Paul E. Scherer
Sunday, WEA and associated stations, 8:30 to 4:00 P.M.
- "HIGH LIGHTS OF THE BIBLE"From Aug. 1 to Oct. 31
Dr. Frederick K. Stamm
Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 4:30 to 5:00 P.M.

- "THE WORLD OF RELIGION" From Aug 1 to Oct. 31
 Dr. Stanley High
 Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 5:00 to 5:30 P.M.
- "MORNING DEVOTIONS"
 Daily, except Sunday, WJZ and associated stations, 8:15 A.M. All year.
- "MIDWEEK HYMN SING"
 Every Tuesday, WEA and associated stations, 7:00 to 7:15 P.M.
- "OLD SONGS OF THE CHURCH"
 Every Thursday, WJZ and associated stations, 6:30 to 6:45 P.M.

The weekly religious radio programs now being broadcast are sponsored by fifty-three city, county and state church federations and the Federal Council, and have had a weekly distribution of 364 station periods during the first nine months of 1932, an increase of 309 periods since 1928. This unusual progress is noted in the following schedule of the weekly distribution during the past five years:

	Station periods
1928	55
1929	125
1930	212
1931	332
1932 (9 months)	364

SOME ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN CHURCH COOPERATION IN 1932

SAMUEL MCCREA CAVERT

General Secretary of the Federal Council

AMONG the concrete achievements of the Federal Council of Churches during 1932, illustrative of its range of interest and effort, were the following:

1. A Cooperative Program in Evangelism and the deepening of the spiritual life was carried across the country through a series of interdenominational conferences attended by 4,500 ministers in thirty major cities.

2. "The Fellowship of Prayer," a booklet prepared for daily devotional use during the Lenten season, had a circulation of 750,000 among the people of all denominations. Countless additional persons received its messages through the daily newspapers.

3. A New Committee on Worship, made up of representatives of the major denominations, was created for the purpose of reinforcing the movement for reverence and spiritual vitality in Protestant churches. A library on worship and the devotional life was developed.

4. A Special Period of Penitence and Prayer, in view of the grave difficulties confronting the nation and the world, was promoted for united observance throughout the churches. One hundred and thirty-seven thousand copies of an inspirational pamphlet were distributed.

5. A Program for Mobilizing the Churches of all denominations to cooperate in unemployment relief was carried out. A pamphlet, New Methods for Old in Unemployment Relief, gives practical suggestions to local churches.

6. A Special Fund for Relief and rehabilitation of unemployed miners of West Virginia and Kentucky was raised and tons of clothing also secured, the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) directing the distribution.

7. A Group of Four Hundred Mennonites, forced to flee from Russia because of religious persecution, was transported to Paraguay, and established in a new home by the Central Bureau for Relief of the Evangelical Churches of Europe, set up by the Federal Council.

8. Unemployed Women in the vicinity of New York were assisted by a special fund raised for this purpose. One hundred and forty young women with no means of support, many of whom had others dependent upon them, were given positions in various religious organizations.

9. The Messages of Religious Radio sponsored by the Federal Council reached the point where 364 station periods were broadcast every week. Nation-wide networks carried to millions of listeners the three Sunday afternoon services, two mid-week periods of worship through song, and the daily morning devotions. Fifty thousand requests for copies of radio messages were received and filled during the year; 50,000 other letters expressed appreciation of the services.

10. A New Study Course on Christianity and Economics was prepared for use by groups interested in knowing what light can be derived from Christianity for such a reconstruction of our economic life as will prevent a recurrence of the tragedy of unemployment.

11. A Program for the Observance of Armistice Sunday in the interest of world peace was distributed among pastors of all denominations. Thousands of ministers used the Sunday before Armistice Day as a great occasion for educating their people in the Christian responsibility for building a warless world.

12. A Series of Popular Pamphlets on International Problems, absorbingly interesting and dramatic in form, constructed from the standpoint of Christian principles, was prepared and distributed through the churches.

13. A Program for Saving the Victims of the China Flood succeeded in raising more than $300,000 by "Flood Relief in China," launched through the cooperation of the Federal Council and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America. (Since 1928, this China Relief—famine and flood—has totaled $1,616,915, equal to about $6,000,000 in Chinese currency.)

14. The Fourth Great World Friendship Project for children was launched, providing for the enlisting of hundreds of thousands of children in our American Sunday schools and young people's societies in sending "Friendship Folios" to the children of China. Earlier projects cultivated friendly understanding between the children of America and those of Japan, Mexico, and the Philippines.

15. Education in Christian Marriage and Family Life has been furthered by three new publications on important aspects of the problem: a revised edition of Ideals of Love and Marriage, a study of the intermarriage of members of different Christian communions (see Federal Council Bulletin, April, 1932), and a bibliography on Young People's Relationships, Marriage and Family Life.

16. A National Church Conference of Social Work brought together representatives of many denominations interested in improving the quality of social work in the churches and emphasizing the spiritual side of professional social work.

17. In the Interest of Interracial Understanding and cooperation the Sunday nearest Lincoln's Birthday was utilized by churches throughout the nation as Race Relations Sunday for exchange of pulpits and other interracial activities.

18. A Research Study of Social and Economic Conditions in three southern states had the hearty cooperation of local white and Negro leaders.

19. A Comprehensive Study of Christian Social Responsibilities was made, the results of which are gathered in a new document entitled The Social Ideals of the Churches.

20. Information Service was published weekly, giving to about 5,000 ministers, teachers and religious workers in many denominations the unbiased factual data that they need in order to carry on their work wisely.

21. In Two of the Most Urgent Fields of the Church's interest—namely, evangelism and the cultivation of Christian family life—additional full-time members of the staff, especially for field work, have been secured. (Fuller information on all these points is given in the Annual Report for the Federal Council for 1932.)

DIRECTORY OF RELIGIOUS BODIES
IN THE U. S.

DIRECTORY OF RELIGIOUS BODIES

AN ATTEMPT is made in this section of the YEARBOOK to present, not so much a roster, as a perspective of American religious organization. The census of 1926 listed 212 separate religious bodies presumed to have a national organization. Some of them were collected in groups. Others were put in an alphabetic place, the alphabetizing not being based on any group relationships. The list here presented is, so far as possible, by groups, of which 32 are arranged. The smaller bodies with characteristics which do not lend themselves easily to classification and those with individualistic history or purposes are placed in a "miscellaneous" group.

The picture, then, is of 32 groupings rather than of 212 "denominations." In addition each description includes a reference to membership so that numerical importance may be quickly measured. It has also seemed worth while to include a reference to the page in the authoritative government census (Religious Bodies, 1926, Vol. II) for those who wish to obtain more detailed information.

What is believed to be a new and perhaps helpful addition to a religious bodies directory are the charts prepared by the editor to cover most of the groups. They show lineage and chronology and offer a handy opportunity to differentiate between the confusing names that are included in the list. The charts have, of course, presented many difficulties and will doubtless raise questions. Authorities in the various bodies have been consulted by the compiler but there are probably errors in dates as well as debatable juxtapositions. It will be well to consider these attempts at graphic presentation as tentative with adaptations or adjustments inevitable.

The time has seemed to be ripe for taking notice of a significant movement in American Protestantism of the past quarter century, the institutionalizing of the "holiness" movement. There are upward of 31 religious bodies listed with emphasis on "holiness" doctrine, and these—or the larger number of them—have been charted by Prof. M. E. Gaddis, of Fayette, Mo., and by permission the result is presented here.

The charts portray vertical divisions of American Protestantism. Other charts might be worked out to record horizontal strata or cleavages (race, polity, theology, orders, etc.). Succeeding issues of the YEARBOOK will offer such studies if the present attempt meets with encouragement.

The description of each body is submitted with hesitation but with an earnest desire to give the briefest and most suggestive two or three lines to help the puzzled reader find his way through the maze of de-nominal peculiarities of names and origins.

THE ADVENTISTS

A group of bodies dating back to the preaching and predictions of William Miller during the period, 1831-1849. The general designation is derived from their belief in the personal and premillennial advent of Christ to begin His reign on earth.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

A group of Adventists began very early in the history of the movement to observe the seventh day (in 1844-5) and developed into a general conference in 1863 and finally into the largest body of this group. The 1926 Census reported 1,981 congregations and 110,998 members.

Baptists date their American beginnings back to 1639 under Roger Williams in Rhode Island. They have grown into a group of at least nineteen bodies and have contributed to the formation of many other bodies whose names do not suggest Baptist origin. They brought the tradition of dissent in its most permeable form to the New World and have profoundly affected the cultural development of the nation. They present today the largest single group of Protestants nearly ninety-five per cent of their number being enrolled in the Northern Baptist Convention, the Southern Baptist Convention and the two National Conventions (Negro). [C. p. 77]

American Baptists are related to Baptist bodies throughout the world in the Baptist World Alliance:

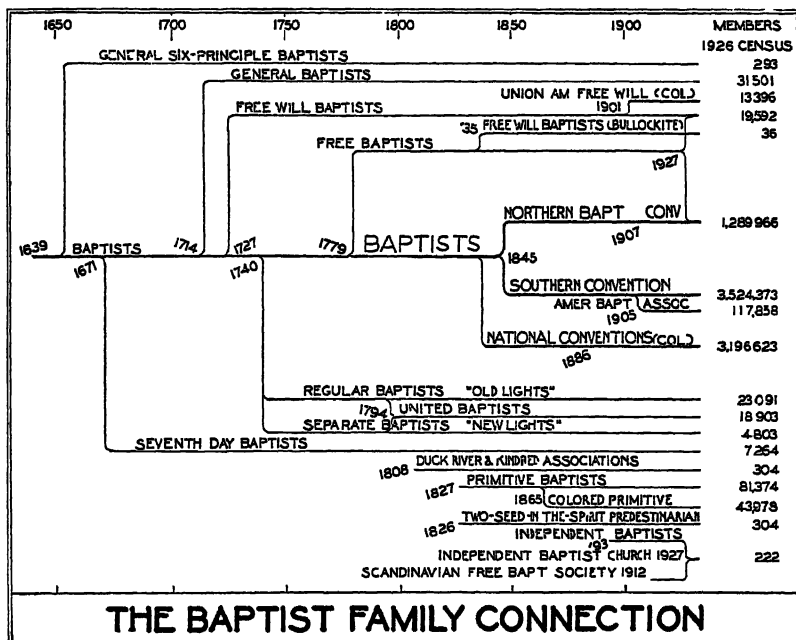

CHART II In the Baptist Family Connection Chart, the 18th century separations from the main line of Baptists, due to Arminian movements, are found at the top of the chart. The main line of Baptists separated into the Northern Baptist, the Southern Baptist, and the National Baptist (col.) with the recent American Baptist Association ("Landmarkers") separation in the Southwest is in the center. These four Conventions contain 97 per cent of all Baptists. The bodies in the lower half of the chart are for the most part the strongly Calvinistic separations in the South.

NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION (Chart II)

The very loose early connections of Baptists, inherent in their independency, prevented formation of any general organization until in 1814 a General Missionary Convention was organized to permit Baptists to express themselves in terms of missionary activities. In 1845 the state conventions with their associations in the South withdrew from the General Convention to organize a Southern Baptist Convention. In 1907 a Northern Convention was organized, a delegated body, under whose direction the many agencies of Baptists in the North and West now operate. The membership of the Convention associations was reported in 1932 as 1,385,281 [C. p. 85]

FREE BAPTISTS

In 1779 under the preaching of Benjamin Randall, New Durham, N. Y., a Baptist body was formed, establishing a general conference in 1826, and representing a part of the Armian movement among Baptists. Beginning with 1904 a movement to combine Free Baptists and Baptists of the Northern Convention has progressed until practically all Free Baptist churches, ministers and members are included in the Northern Baptist Convention.

The General Conference of Free Baptists maintains its existence as a legal corporation. Offices: Pres., Joseph W. Mauck, Hillsdale, Mich.; Cor. Sec.-Treas., Rev. Alfred Williams Anthony, 105 E. 22d St., New York, N. Y.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

In 1845 the Southern associations of the Baptists withdrew from the General Missionary Convention over the question of slavery and formed the Southern Baptist Convention which now enrolls the largest single group of Baptists in the world. The Convention reported 3,702,315 members in 1981 [C. p. 103]

CHART III. The chart of a number of bodies which employ the designation "Catholic" is presented with the warning that it does not portray succession in orders, but is presented only as a record in chronology. There are other bodies which should doubtless be included in such a chart

CATHOLIC

(Other than Roman and Eastern Orthodox)

In this group a number of churches appear whose claims to orders and jurisdiction are discussed in the Census reports to which the reader is referred. The Old Catholic movement was promoted by Swiss and Dutch theologians of the continent in opposition to the decree of papal infallibility of 1870. Their followers in limited numbers, on emigrating to America, brought their views and worship with them. Their leaders have sought orders from England, Holland and even from Malabar (an Assyrian Jacobite line). There is not space available to discuss the resulting confusion, and these bodies with others are grouped together without any suggestion that they are related. The African Orthodox Church, located here, though it has Western ritual, prefers to be classed with the Eastern Churches because of its orders.

POLISH NATIONAL CATHOLIC CHURCH OF AMERICA

LITHUANIAN NATIONAL CATHOLIC CHURCH OF AMERICA

Organized by Lithuanians in 1914 at Scranton, Pa., with the help of Bishop Hodur, head of the Polish National Catholic Church of America. In 1924 a bishop was elected and consecrated. He had in 1926, 4 churches and 1,497 members [C. p. 696]

The principal body of Old Catholics in the United States. It is identical with the Roman Catholic Church in worship, faith, etc., but differs from it in discipline. It was incorporated in 1917. It reported (1926 Census) 14,798 members, of whom 24.9 per cent were under 18 years of age. [C. p. 1078]

CHART V The Disciples date back to Presbyterian origins under the Campbells, and to Baptist elements of the early 19th century. The conservative wing of this connection was counted separately in the Census of 1906 and thereafter.

DISCIPLES

(Chart V)

In the revival period of the early 19th century, a movement under Thomas Campbell and his son Alexander Campbell resulted in the establishment of a fellowship whose bonds were very loose and whose designation varied. They were sometimes called "Christians" or "Disciples" and frequently by outsiders "Campbellites." They believe that sects are unscriptural and they are biblicalists and immersionists. In the general body two parties have developed, the "progressive" usually called as above and the "conservative" called and enumerated in the 1926 Census as Churches of Christ (q.v.) The membership of the Disciples of Christ, 1926 Census, was reported to be 1,377,595. CHURCHES OF CHRIST

A large body developed within the body of the followers of Thomas Campbell, opposed to church societies with a money basis, deploring human creeds and endeavoring to follow the example of the primitive church. Until 1906 these churches were reported with the Disciples but have become more clearly distinguishable. Their membership was reported in the 1926 Census as 433,714. [C. p. 394]

DUNKERS

The Dunkers, or German Baptist Brethren, were pietists of Germany who arrived in the colonies as early as 1719, settling at Germantown, Pa., and spreading from there into other sections of the country. They numbered 158,248 members in all their groups in 1926.

CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN (CONSERVATIVE DUNKERS)

(Chart VI)

German pietists from Crefeld, Germany, under the leadership of Peter Becker, entered the colonies in 1719 and settled at Germantown, Philadelphia. They were called Dunkers (baptizers) and were immersionists. The body numbered 128,392 in 1926 Census, and members are very conservative as to attire, oaths or affirmations, resistance to force, temperance and the like. [C. p. 229]

EASTERN ORTHODOX

These churches are direct successors of the original Churches of Antioch, Alexandria, Jerusalem and Constantinople. Immigrant groups from Eastern lands since the fall of the Russian Church have reverted to their national church authority in their spiritual allegiance and have formed missions or churches under national jurisdiction. Inasmuch as political confusion has invaded spiritual jurisdiction, there has been a number of factional disturbances in the larger groups, and the situation as to authority, etc., is not fully clear. Very brief notice is therefore accorded to the bodies included in this list.

ALBANIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

It is estimated that there are 10,000 Albanians in the United States. The Albanian Orthodox Church was reported in the census of 1926 to have nine churches with 1,998 members. [C. p. 487]

BULGARIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

Formerly affiliated with the Russian jurisdiction, the Bulgarians in America broke away from the authority of Russian bishops in 1922 and since that time have had an administrator under the Synod of Bulgaria. The 1926 Census reported four parishes with 987 members. [C. p. 490]

GENERAL ORGANIZATION

ADMINISTRATOR. Archpriest, Dr. K. Tsenoff, Indianapolis, Ind.

CLERGY: Archpriest, David Nakoff, Steelton, Pa.; Archpriest, Velko Karadjoff, Detroit, Mich.; Priest, Velko Popoff, Madison, Ill.

GREEK ORTHODOX CHURCH (HELLENIC)

Greek-speaking Orthodox Christians have had scattered parishes in the United States under Russian ecclesiastical jurisdiction for the last fifty years. The World War brought disintegration in the Russian jurisdiction and led to a transfer of jurisdiction to the Metropolitan of Athens and later to the Patriarchate of Constantinople. These transfers were accompanied by political and other divisive troubles, but in 1931 a general convention was held in New York City, under the presidency of Archbishop Athenagoras which brought a large measure of unity and order. The archdiocese reports a population of Greeks of about 750,000 with 250 congregations. The actual membership, reported by the 1926 Census, was 118,495 in 158 congregations. [C. p. 494]

GENERAL ORGANIZATION

Convention of the Greek Archdiocese of North and South America, biennial (Next meeting, November, 1933, Chicago, Ill.)
Headquarters: 278 Elm St., Astoria, N. Y.

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS

GREEK ORTHODOX SUNDAY SCHOOLS

ROUMANIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

This body is under the spiritual supervision of the Roumanian Holy Synod, its affairs administered by an archpriest (or proto presbyter). There were (1926 Census) 84 parishes with 18,858 members (20.8 per cent under 18 years). [C. p. 501]

RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Russian Orthodox Church entered Alaska in 1792. In 1872 its headquarters were moved to San Francisco and in 1905 to New York, the mission becoming an archdiocese, with two vicar bishops. All Orthodox churches were under this jurisdiction, irrespective of language, until the Revolution in Russia during the World War. The divisions in the Russian Church were duplicated in this country, and there are conflicting hierarchies representing these divisions. The 1926 Census reported 95,184 members in 199 local organizations. [C. p. 506]

SERBIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Serbian Orthodox Church, formerly under the Russian jurisdiction, has a diocese of its own under the Patriarch of Serbia. There were 17 organizations reported in 1926, with 13,775 members [C. p. 516]

SYRIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Syrian Orthodox churches are divided in their allegiance between the Russian jurisdiction, two independent movements, and a recent endeavor to establish an American Orthodox Church to embrace the entire Orthodox constituency, irrespective of race or language. (See next description) [C. p. 519]

HOLY EASTERN ORTHODOX CATHOLIC AND APOSTOLIC CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA

This body, referred to in the Census, Religious Bodies, Vol. II, page 484, as being in process of formation, was organized in 1927. It is an attempt to gather into one American Orthodox Church the adherents of the Eastern Church now separated into at least seven major racial or national groups. Membership reported December, 1932, 155,000 persons, in 72 congregations and missions.

GENERAL ORGANIZATION

EASTERN SEPARATED CHURCHES

Two very ancient Churches of the East, which separated from the Eastern Orthodox Church at a very remote period, are represented by organizations in the U. S. They minister to Armenians and to Syrians

ARMENIAN APOSTOLIC CHURCH IN AMERICA

The American branch of the ancient separated Church of Armenia, organized by St. Gregory in 301 A. D. In 1889 a priest was sent to minister to a parish in Worcester, Mass. Today there is a prelate under the spiritual jurisdiction of the Holy See of Etchmiadzin, Armenia. The Prelate reports forty organized parishes and many small parishes with periodical worship through arrangement with local Episcopal rectors. The 1926 Census reported 28,181 members. [C. p. 335]

EVANGELICAL BODIES

In this group are included three diverse developments among the German and Scandinavian population-strains. The Evangelical Synod is a Calvinistic Body originating in the union of Reformed and Lutheran Churches in Germany under the designation "Evangelical." The Evangelical Church and its branch, Evangelical Congregational Church, are Arminian, the result of the evangelical movement on the Germans of Pennsylvania. (In this connection the United Brethren and the Churches of God in North America, the effect of the same movement among the Reformed, also appear.) The Scandinavian Evangelical bodies are the transfer of religious movements within or apart from the State Churches of Norway, Sweden and Denmark to America.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

The evangelistic movement at the end of the 18th century moved Jacob Albright (1759-1808), born and confirmed a Lutheran, converted by a Reformed minister, to found a church, in 1808, at first known as the Evangelical Association, which in doctrine is Arminian and in policy is modeled after the Methodist type. Membership (1926 Census), 206,080. [C. p. 522]

Quakers, so called, or Friends, arrived in the colonies as early as 1656. They were followers of George Fox (1624-1691), and with others suffered persecution. In 1724 tolerance was won and in the course of time the group became very influential. Differences arose in 1827-8 (the Hicksite separation, influenced by the Unitarian movement in New England), in 1845 (the Wilburite separation) and in 1861 (the Primitive separation from the Wilburite branch). The main line, the Society of Friends (Orthodox), has fourteen yearly meetings of which twelve are reported under that name, and two independent yearly meetings, Philadelphia and vicinity, and Ohio. All of these meetings, with all other bodies of Friends, cooperate in the American Friends' Service Committee. [C p. 607]

Comprises the largest body of Friends. Often designated "Quakers" from a name applied to them very early in their history by a judge whom George Fox called on "to tremble at the Word of the Lord." In 1902 twelve of the fourteen yearly meetings entered into a loose confederation. Membership (1926 Census), 91,326

In 1845 under the leadership of John Wilbur a separation from the main line of Friends was brought about and has since grown to six yearly meetings. Membership (1926 Census).
 2,966 [C. p. 626]

PRIMITIVE FRIENDS

 The Census reported one church with 25 members in 1926. [C. p. 631]

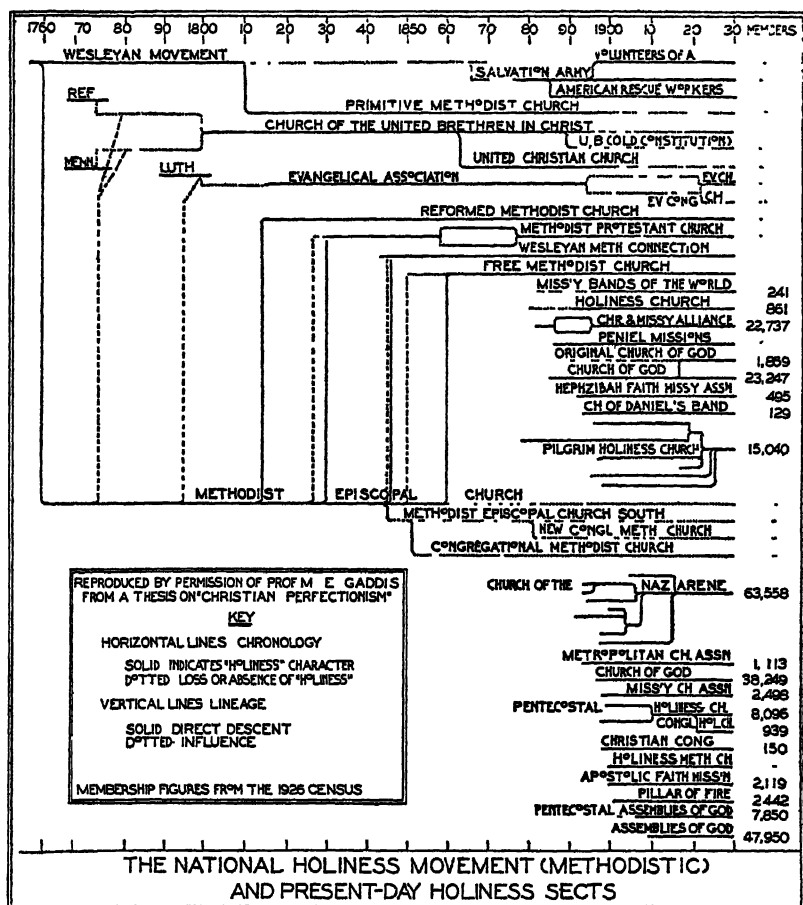

CHART IX. The Holiness Movement, with emphasis on the doctrine of sanctification, when it was checked in the Methodist Church, produced a great variety of independent movements which gradually coalesced into a number of connections. Through the courtesy of Professor M. E. Gaddis of Fayette, Mo., we are able to reproduce his chart of this movement, somewhat adapted. Other Holiness bodies, especially among Negroes, will be found in the Directory under the group heading.

HOLINESS BODIES

A large group of organizations developed at the end of the nineteenth century around the Methodist idea of Christian perfectionism. The extreme implications of this doctrine were frowned upon by the large Methodist bodies and gradually, in many parts of the country, both white and colored churches were established, which have come to be known as "Holiness" religious bodies. The left wing is represented by the Pentecostal groups, sometimes referred to as "ecstatic," and the right wing, exemplified by the Church of the Nazarene, has approached the Methodist type of body. In this grouping, which is presented for the first time in this Directory, the arrangement is by size of membership.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

LUTHERANS

The first Lutheran Church in the colonies dates back to 1638. The first general organization was the Evangelical Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania organized under the leadership of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg in 1748. Immigration from many Lutheran countries has brought a great variety of languages, racial and confessional groupings, which are being gradually brought into cohesion. [C. p. 698]

The following general Lutheran bodies unite in specific purposes in the National Lutheran Council: United Lutheran Church, American Lutheran Church, Augustana Synod, Norwegian Lutheran Church, Lutheran Free Church, United Danish Church, and the Icelandic Synod.

METHODISTS

(Charts XII, IX)

John and Charles Wesley, leaders of a great revival movement in England, visited the colonies in 1785. Subsequently itinerant preachers were sent over from abroad, and in 1773 the first annual conference was held of "preachers in connection with Mr. John Wesley." The Methodist Episcopal Church was formed in 1784. It is Arminian in theology, and its most distinctive emphasis has been on conversion and the doctrine of sanctification. The number of members in the U. S., reported in 1931, was 4,016,919. [C. p. 914]

GENERAL ORGANIZATION

General Conference, quadrennial

PRESBYTERIANS

Presbyterians from England were present in the earliest groups of New England settlers. Scotch and Irish immigrants came later in great numbers and were among the early pioneers in the settlement of the country west of the original colonies. The dissensions in Scotland over the relationship of church and state were later introduced into America. Presbyterians have always been proud of their representative form of government as contrasted with the other two prevailing types, the congregational and episcopal.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA (Chart XIII)

This body, distinguished by its representative form of government and its Calvinistic theology, appeared among the earliest colonists in America. Its first church was established about 1640, and its first presbytery in 1706. Its last report (1932) indicated a membership of 1,957,999 in continental United States. [C. p. 1116]

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

(Chart XIII)

In 1806 a presbytery (Cumberland in Kentucky) of the Presbyterian Church was dissolved by its synod on account of its attitude toward revivalism. Members of the presbytery organized an independent body in 1810 which became the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. This body reunited with the Presbyterian Church, U S A. in 1907 but a minority continued the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Membership (1926 Census), 87,988.

PLYMOUTH BRETHREN

A movement originating in England about 1827, taking its name from a group at Plymouth and brought to the United States by English immigrants John Nelson Darby, George Muller of Bristol, Samuel Prideaux Tregelles, and others, were prominent in the movement. There was no ecclesiastical organization and there have been a number of differences of opinion which have resulted in a division in the reporting of these Brethren in the Census into groups indicated by Roman numerals; Plymouth Brethren I, II, III, IV, V, VI The total number reported in the Census of 1926 for the six groupings was 22,961 [C. pp. 255-288]

REFORMED

Calvinists from Holland settled New York as early as 1628 and were followed later by German settlers who brought with them the Reformed Church of Germany Both groups used the Heidelberg Catechism and adhered to the Calvinistic and Zwinglian modifications of the Reformation

REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA

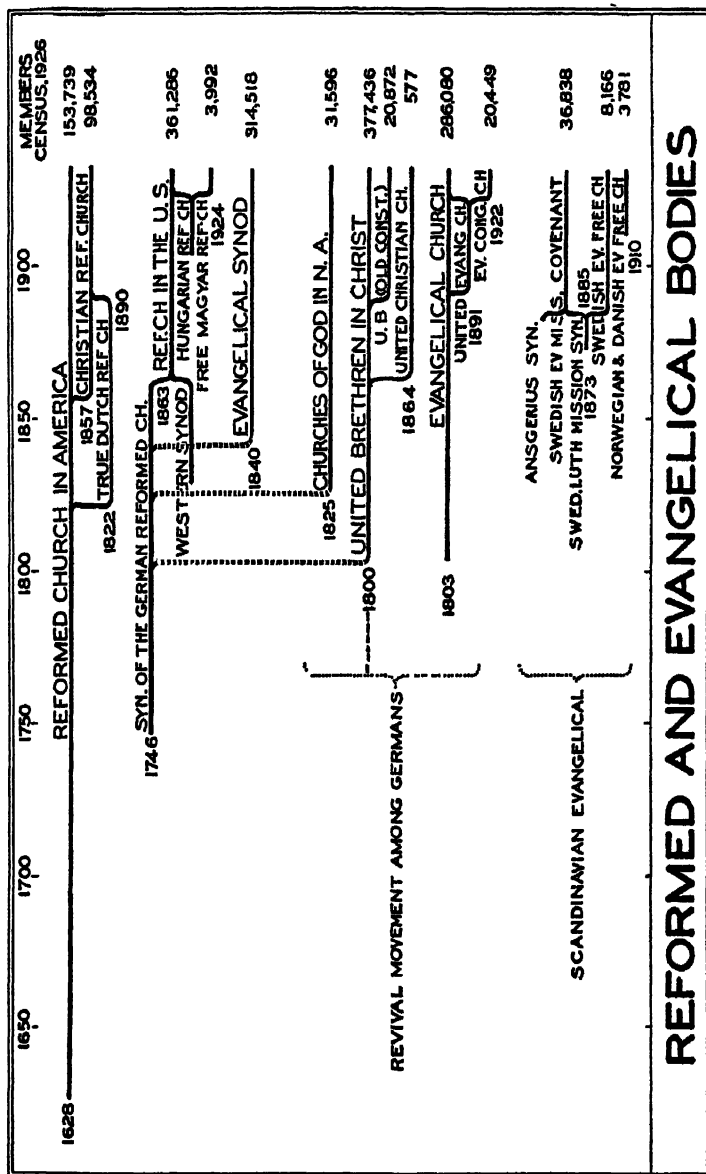

CHART XIV. For the sake of conciseness, the Reformed and Evangelical bodies are constructed into one chart. There are three national strains, Dutch, German and Scandinavian—the Dutch at the top, the German group in the center, and the Scandinavian group at the bottom. A strong revival movement beginning with the Great Awakening and continuing under Methodist pressure resulted in the establishment of three denominations among the Germans with Arminian theology as contrasted with the Calvinism of the Reformed and Lutheran Churches. The dotted lines represent only partial connection.

MISCELLANEOUS

In this section are grouped a number of bodies representing individualistic, unique, or unclassified trends of doctrines or polity. Some of them are of outstanding importance, and classification here does not imply any discrimination. Rationalistic and non-Christian bodies, as well as some very old Christian fellowships, are placed here.

AMANA CHURCH SOCIETY (Called also the Community of True Inspiration)

THE REORGANIZATION OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

ON DECEMBER 6-9, in Indianapolis, Ind., the Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America effected a reorganization designed to relate the Council still more closely to the constituent denominations. The chief changes, all of which have been incorporated into the constitution and by-laws of the Council, are as follows:

1. The Council henceforth is to meet every two years instead of every four years as formerly. Officers are elected for two years instead of four.

2. The Executive Committee, which formerly met annually, and the Administrative Committee, which met monthly, have been combined into a single governing body known as the Executive Committee, which is to meet monthly except when otherwise ordered by its own vote.

3. All members, both of the Council and the Executive Committee, are appointed directly by the denominations themselves.

4. The size of the Council is somewhat reduced. Each denomination is to have three members in the Council, with an additional member for every 100,000 of its communicants or major fraction thereof. On the Executive Committee, each denomination is to have two members with an additional member for every 500,000 (or major fraction thereof) of its communicants after the first 500,000.

5. In the place of the various Commissions and Committees, the work of the Council is to be divided into eight major departments. (See page 220.) The Departments, while accorded initiative and liberty of action in their methods and in their undertakings, are under the direction of the Executive Committee, and all their utterances must be approved by the Executive Committee.

6. Another amendment to the Constitution was proposed which would empower the Council "to administer for any of the constituent bodies such activities as they may commit to it and as the Council may accept." The effect of this would be to authorize the Council to perform delegated administrative functions—in addition to being an advisory, educational, and coordinating body. On this proposal there was sharp debate. An informal vote showed a majority in its favor but it was felt unwise to adopt a change of such far-reaching possibilities without substantial unanimity and it was accordingly agreed to defer final decision till the next meeting of the Council in 1934.

ACTIONS OF THE QUADRENNIAL MEETING OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

THE more important actions of the Federal Council of Churches at its Quadrennial Meeting held in Indianapolis, December 6-9, 1932, were as follows:

1. A reorganization of the structure of the Council was effected, involving important constitutional amendments, in the interest of relating it more closely to the denomination. (See page 226.)

2. A revised statement of "Social Ideals of the Churches," taking the place of the original "Social Creed" formulated in 1908, was adopted. (See page 319.)

3. A program for securing justice and brotherhood in race relations was formulated, including the observance of Race Relations Sunday, the holding of interracial conferences, a campaign against lynching, efforts to remove economic and social discriminations against minority racial groups, and the fostering of appreciation of the cultural contributions of diverse racial groups. (See Federal Council Bulletin, February, 1933.)

4. Continued support was given to the policy of prohibition of the liquor traffic.

5. After an extended discussion of the morality of birth control the Executive Committee was requested to give careful study to the subject and to report to the next meeting of the Council in 1934. The denominations were also invited to study the problem and report their findings to the Executive Committee for its guidance.

6. A Memorial on World Peace was adopted. It holds that the Church "should not sanction war nor bless it" and supports the principle that willingness to take part as a combatant in war should not be a necessary condition for admission to citizenship in the United States. Among the international policies for which church support is urged are: Reduction of armaments by international agreement; strengthening the Peace Pact by withholding recognition of "any situation, treaty or agreement" brought about in violation of the Pact; cooperation with the League of Nations in seeking a peaceful settlement of the Sino-Japanese controversy and in the holding of a World Economic Conference; a downward revision of intergovernmental debts due to the United States; American membership in the World Court and rigid control of the private manufacture of, and traffic in, munitions and implements of war. (See Federal Council Bulletin, January, 1933.)

7. A program for building up regular church attendance, the conservation of the membership of the churches and constructive evangelistic efforts to increase church membership was adopted.

8. The Federal Council's Radio Department was authorized not only to cooperate with the national chain broadcasting companies but also to give assistance to city and state councils of churches in working out their own local programs of religious radio.

9. The ad interim Committee on Worship was made a permanent part of the Council's organization and work.

10. The United Church of Canada was invited to enter into co-operation with the Council, the details of the arrangement to be worked out in conference. If the plan is consummated it will be the first time that a church body outside of the United States has become related to the Council.

11. Approval was given for participation in a World Conference on Christian Life and Work, to be held sometime between 1935 and 1937, following up the plans developed by the world conference on this subject in Stockholm in 1925.

BODIES RELATED TO THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

I. HOME MISSIONS COUNCIL

OFFICE. 105 E. 22d St., New York, N. Y.

OFFICERS: Pres., Rev. John McDowell; Vice-Pres., Rev. Ernest M. Halliday; Rec. Sec., Rev. Jay S. Stowell, Exec. Sec., Rev. William R. King; Treas., A. M. Behrens

The Home Missions Council was organized in 1908 by the representatives of a number of home mission boards. At present there are 31 Protestant home mission boards and societies in the United States and Canada, representing 25 denominations, which are constituent members.

The purpose of the Council is to promote fellowship, conference and cooperation among Christian organizations doing missionary work in the United States, Canada and dependencies.

The Home Missions Council is closely related to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and works in cordial relationship with the Council of Women for Home Missions. The offices of the three organizations are in the same building. Cooperating relationships have been established jointly by the Federal Council and the Home Missions Council with the Community Church Workers of U. S. A.

The Home Missions Council functions through a small staff at the national headquarters in New York, and through the executive and administrative committees, standing committees, special committees and joint committees; on the field through state home missions councils and state superintendent councils.

The general home mission program is furthered through cooperation of representatives of denominational boards in church building and architecture, town and country work, city work and work for new Americans, comity, education and publicity, Spanish-speaking work, interdenominational directors in government Indian schools, etc.

The special five-year program of survey and adjustment in the field of interdenominational comity and home missions, and the North American Home Missions Congress are sponsored by the Home Missions Council in cooperation with the Federal Council of Churches and the Council of Women for Home Missions. This program includes a survey of local communities in the United States, the organization of state and local cooperative groups, a restudy of the whole field of home missions, and adjustments in local communities which are overchurched, underchurched, or inadequately churched.

OFFICERS, 1932: Hon. Pres., Mrs. George W. Coleman; Pres., Mrs. Orrin R. Judd; First Western Field Sec. and Supt. for Migrant Work, Adela J. Ballard; Asst. Treas., G. Evelyn Thurd; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Fred S. Bennett, Rec. Sec., Julia Florance, Treas., Mrs. Edwin W. Lentz.

EXECUTIVE STAFF: Exec. Sec., Anne Seesholtz; Sec. for Migrant Work, Edith E. Lowry; Western Field Sec. and Sup. for Migrant Work, Adela J. Ballard, Asst. Treas., G. Evelyn Morse; Office Sec., Mabel Dudley.

MEMBERSHIP: Constituent organizations, 24 national home mission boards in Canada and United States. Related in joint program committees with Home Missions Council; Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America; National Council of Federated Church Women PURPOSE: To unify the efforts of national women's home mission boards, societies, and committees by consultation and cooperation in action; and to represent Protestant church women in such national movements as they desire to promote interdenominationally.

PRINCIPAL ACTIVITIES

COMMITTEE ON MIGRANT WORK: (Composed of representatives of fourteen boards, executive committee of Council and advisory members)

OFFICERS: Chmn., Laura H. Parker; Sec., Edith E. Lowry; Western Supervisor, Adela J. Ballard.

This committee administers a program of Christian social service among migratory families harvesting and canning crops, and continually studies phases of the migrant problem. The service program is adapted to specific needs in each community. It includes health work and religious education by trained workers who go from camp to camp in areas where migrants are widely scattered. In districts where large numbers of migrants are centrally located, Christian centers are organized which are a combination of day nursery, health center, recreational center and kindergarten.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON INDIAN WORK: (A committee of the Home Missions Council and Council of Women for Home Missions.)

OFFICERS: Chmn., Dr. Frank A. Smith; Dir., Anne Seesholtz.

This Joint Committee, representing national home mission groups of men and women, aims to correlate and unify the Protestant church work among the Indians; to act as a liaison body between the government and church boards; to be a source of up-to-date and correct information concerning the Indian situation, and to administer a program of religious education in the government boarding schools.

WORLD PEACE: Through promotion of the World Day of Prayer (first Friday in Lent); through the Eva Clark Waid Memorial Fund for World Peace; and through active cooperation with National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War, Women's Joint Congressional Committee, Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, etc

LEADERSHIP TRAINING: Through interdenominational conferences such as The City and the Church in the Present Crisis, annual Chautauqua Home Missions Institute, and through schools of missions and promotion of study courses in the local churches.

OFFICE IN NEW YORK, 804 Pershing Sq. Bldg

The governing body of the International Council is an executive committee composed of approximately 190 representatives, selected by the different cooperating denominations, allotted numerically in proportion to membership and by the accredited auxiliary state and provincial councils of religious education. Each professional advisory section also elects a consulting member of the Council. This representative body determines policy and programs principally through the International Curriculum Guide. It establishes standards for the church school which are voluntarily accepted by the cooperating denominations and the auxiliary state councils, including standards for the church school, the children's, young people's and adult divisions of the church school, leadership training, and for vacation and weekday church schools.

The Educational Commission of the Council (Dean Luther A. Weigle, Chairman) is composed of representatives chosen by each of the cooperating denominations having a curriculum or lesson committee, together with twenty members at large elected by the International Council, and members of the Council staff. Each of the professional advisory sections elects a consulting member.

The Commission functions through a Central Committee and the following additional Committees:

- (1) Committee on Improved Uniform Lessons.
- (2) Committee on Group Graded Lessons.
- (3) Committee on Religious Education of Children
- (4) Committee on Religious Education of Youth.
- (5) Committee on Religious Education of Adults.
- (6) Committee on Leadership Training
- (7) Committee on Church School Administration.
- (8) Committee on Field Program.
- (9) Special Committee on Vacation and Weekday Church Schools.

The professional advisory sections represent the different educational groups specializing in the field of religious education as follows:

Children's Work
Young People's Work
Adult Work
Directors of Religious Education Denominational Editors.
Denominational Publishers
International and National Executives
Professors of Religious Education
State and Regional Executives

City Executives
Laymen's Advisory Section
Weekday Religious Education
Vacation Church Schools
Leadership Training Negro Work
Missionary Education Research
Pastors

These advisory sections hold annual meetings extending over two or three days and make recommendations through their consulting members to the Council on matters of administration and to the Educational Commission on questions of educational policy and programs

The official publication of the Council is The International Journal of Religious Education, edited by a board of editors composed of the Council staff and certain assistants to whom are assigned special duties

COUNCIL OF CHURCH BOARDS OF EDUCATION

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS

OFFICE: 347 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

OFFICERS: Pres., George B. Cutten; Chmn. Gen. Board, Adrian Lyon; Gen. Sec., John E. Manley; Treas., Walter W. Head.

PURPOSE: To promote the spiritual, intellectual, physical, and social well-being of boys and young men; to develop Christian character and a Christian society.

PERIODICALS: National Council Bulletin, Editor, J. E. Sproul; Young Men, Editor, Frank G. Weaver

The following types and numbers of Associations are officially related to the National Council: City Associations (731), Railroad Associations (150), Colored Men's Associations (50), Army and Navy Associations (82), Associations in Colleges and Universities (204), and Town and Country Associations (74). These Associations report a membership of 847,155, classified as follows: men, 25 years old and over, 289,177; men, 18 to 24, 211,690; and boys, 12 to 17, 173,577. Active membership in the Associations is restricted to members of evangelical churches, but other young men are admitted with all privileges except that of voting.

Formal educational work includes day and night courses on vocational and cultural subjects in the junior college, secondary, and technological fields (enrolling an annual total of over 65,000 students), and research and experiment in educational methods. Informal education is provided in lectures, clubs, forums, and discussion groups on a wide range of adult interests. Health education and physical work include gymnasium classes (392,988 persons enrolled in 15,289 classes—a total attendance of 13,854,500), camps (80,950 campers attending 1,141 camps), and competitive sports. Boys' work is focused on the interests of boys in a wide range of groups—Bible study, hobby and interest, teams, classes, councils, and clubs (14,408 boys' groups enrolled 285,251 boys, with a total attendance of 8,413,000. Total boys' membership was 254,276. The proportional boy membership in city Associations is 54.3 per cent.) Interracial relations have been promoted through the organization and training in actual cooperation of large numbers of white and colored people, and through demonstrations of interracial cooperation. There are 28,641 events supervised for members employed in 8,385 industrial plants. There were 96,970 persons enrolled in 3,520 Bible classes, and 8,048 religious discussion groups report a total attendance of 803,800 persons. A total of 6,849 people have been led to unite with the Church. Vocational and employment services in the Associations gave 406,807 interviews and secured 76,539 positions for applicants. Dormitories report 62,191 beds with total lodgings of 14,487,000. Restaurants served 24,268,000 meals. The student work reaches a total membership of more than 45,000 in over 200 student Associations. The Student Division is also affiliated with the World's Student Christian Federation, which has branches in 8,000 centers of higher learning and a membership of 800,000 students and professors. The National Council provides direct architectural, financial, membership, and motion picture service to the local Associations.

NATIONAL BOARD OF THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS OF THE U. S. A.

OFFICE: 600 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL BOARD: Pres., Mrs. Frederick M. Paist; Hon. Pres., Mrs. Robert E. Speer; First Vice-Pres., Mrs. John French; Second Vice-Pres., Mrs. Harold Hatch; Third Vice-Pres., Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James; Chmn., Exec. Com., Mrs. E. C. Carter; Sec., Miss Margaret T. Applegarth; Treas., Mrs. Samuel Murtland; Asst. Treas., Miss May B. Van Arsdale; Gen. Sec., Miss Anna V. Rice; Assoc. Gen. Sec., Miss Emma P. Hirth.

The National Board is the executive body of the Young Women's Christian Associations of the United States of America. This national organization is made up of about 1,100 local Y. W. C. A.'s in city, town, rural, and student communities and has a membership of more than 600,000 women and girls. Through its Foreign Division it works with the World's Council of the Y. W. C. A., headquarters at Geneva, Switzerland, in extending its work with girls and women throughout the world.

PURPOSE: The immediate purpose of this organization shall be to unite in one body the Young Women's Christian Associations of the United States; to establish, develop, and unify such Associations; to participate in the work of the World's Young Women's Christian Association; to advance the physical, social, intellectual, moral, and spiritual interests of young women. The ultimate purpose of all its efforts shall be to seek to bring young women to such a knowledge of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord as shall mean for the individual young women fullness of life and development of character, and shall make the organization as a whole an effective agency in the bringing in of the Kingdom of God among young women.

The United Stewardship Council has no constitution or by-laws. Its membership is composed of denominational representatives of stewardship and such other persons as are elected for membership to serve for three years. Twenty-five denominations are represented on the Council.

It meets at least once a year, the annual meeting being held in December. The Committees are at work during the year assisting the denominations in cooperative work. They promote the circulation of stewardship books such as Stevenson's Christ and the Economic Crisis which resulted from the World Stewardship Conference in Edinburgh in 1931. They supply stewardship material to the lesson writers in the cooperating denominations and assure the inclusion of these lessons in the series.

They advocate schools of stewardship and the inclusion of stewardship in schools of missions. They urge stewardship study courses in summer assemblies and training schools. The annual statistics of giving in the cooperating denominations are collected by the secretary and widely distributed in printed form. In the form in which they are provided they rather accurately indicate the course of mission and benevolent as well as other giving in a representative group of religious bodies.

A World Stewardship Union was formed after the success of the Edinburgh Conference was apparent. It is being developed by an Ad Interim Committee which has two divisions, one across the sea, the other, American. It is proposed to arrange another World Conference in the United States after a suitable interval, and for this event members of the United Stewardship Council, who also function on this ad interim organization, are laying plans.

FOREIGN MISSIONS CONFERENCE OF NORTH AMERICA

OFFICE: 418 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.

OFFICERS: Chmn., Dr. P. H. J. Lerrigo; First Vice-Chmn., Chas. D. Bonsack; Second Vice-Chmn., Mrs. Gilbert Ferrabee; Secs., Leslie B. Moss, A. L. Warnshuis; Treas., James M. Speers.

PURPOSE: To provide for an annual conference of the foreign mission boards and societies of North America; to provide, through its committees, for the investigation and study of missionary problems; to foster and promote a true science of missions, and to perform directly or through its committees certain specific work of interest to boards and societies participating in the Conference.

The Foreign Missions Conference has a history running back to 1898, since which time it has been a steady influence in developing a cooperative spirit and practice among the missionary boards of the United States and Canada. The proceedings of its annual gatherings are a most important body of materials dealing with missionary programs and policies.

The Committee of Reference and Counsel is the executive agency of the Foreign Missions Conference. Its officers are: Chmn., Miss Sarah S. Lyon; Vice-Chmn., Dr. W. G. Cram; Rec. Sec., F. M. Potter; Secs., Leslie B. Moss, A. L. Warnshuis; Treas., James M. Speers.

PURPOSE To provide and carry out an adequate program of missionary education. To challenge Christian students to choose their vocations in line with the purpose of God in the life of the world and the will of God for their own lives. To recruit from among students well-qualified men and women for Christian service abroad. To relate such recruits to the various missionary sending agencies. To provide a fellowship designed to crystallize missionary interest into an ever-deepening conviction which will find expression either in service abroad or in intelligent interest in and support of the missionary enterprise.

CONTINUATION COMMITTEE OF THE WORLD CONFERENCE ON FAITH AND ORDER

OFFICERS: Treas., Hon. Alanson B. Houghton, 501 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Secretary, P. O. Box 228, Boston, Mass.

PURPOSE: "The clear statement and full consideration of those things in which we [Christians] differ, as well as of those things in which we are at one" The studies begun at the Lausanne Conference in 1927 relate to the nature of the Church, the creeds, the ministry, the sacraments and kindred subjects. The invitation is addressed to "all Christian communions throughout the world which confess our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior." More than a hundred nationwide communions are now participating in this work. The Second World Conference will be held at Lausanne, Switzerland, in August, 1937

UNIVERSAL CHRISTIAN COUNCIL FOR LIFE AND WORK

INTERNATIONAL OFFICES: Geneva, Switzerland, 2 rue de Montchoisy; London, England, 4 The Sanctuary, S.W. 1, Paris, France, 3 rue des Renaudes; New York, N. Y., U. S. A., 287 Fourth Ave.

OFFICERS: Joint Pres., The Lord Bishop of Chichester; His Grace the Metropolitan of Thyateira; Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D.D.; Dr. H. Kapler, Chmn. of Council and Exec. Com., The Lord Bishop of Chichester, Chmn. of Admin. Com., Dr. William Adams Brown; Gen. Sec., Henry L. Henriod, 2 rue de Montchoisy, Geneva, Switzerland; Hon. Lecture, Dr. Adolf Keller.

AMERICAN SECTION Chmn., S. Parkes Cadman, Exec. Sec., Henry Smith Leiper.

The vision of a great Swedish churchman, Nathan Söderblom, Archbishop of Upsala, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1930, led to the first step in proving that visible unity for Christian service was possible. In 1925 more than 500 official representatives of the Christian churches of East and West assembled at Stockholm to consider the Church's task in the modern world in terms of practical Christianity, dealing with the fields of personal, domestic, social, and international ethics. Only one great Church was missing (though invited), the Church of Rome.

The conference was a conspicuous fact, but it was only a beginning. For continued action a permanent body is required. This body, the Universal Christian Council, which has grown out of the Continuation Committee of the conference, is devoting its attention to practical Christianity, not a particular system of economics but the living of the Christian life. The International Christian Social Institute at Geneva, which is the local name for the central office of the Council, has been studying such problems as unemployment, the opium traffic, the fixation of Easter, and other outstanding problems. It is in constant touch with the International Labor Office and other bodies dealing with problems of human relations. Its General Secretary for Administration is likewise General Secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches, with whose international peace work the Council cooperates. It is planned to hold a world gathering every ten years. The Council meets biennially, its Executive Committee meeting in alternate years. The 1932 Council was held in Geneva, the Executive Committee meets in 1933 at Novi Sad, Yugoslavia.

National Councils in America, Austria, Belgium, Great Britain, Australia, Canada, India, New Zealand, South Africa, Bulgaria, China, Czechoslovakia, Danzig, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Jugoslavia, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxemburg, Memelgebiet, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

PURPOSE: To unite all Christians and churches in promoting international friendship; to secure such a League of Nations as can settle international difficulties by judicial and other processes rather than by war; to provide American laws for the adequate protection of aliens; and to promote right relations with Japan and China, Mexico and Latin America.

Holds annual world conferences; is widely extending its work throughout the world

The ideal of the World Alliance is to bring to bear in the work of the church in the field not only all the wisdom possessed by the churches and groups individually and collectively, but to gather about the central organization groups of men and women capable and willing to help in making effective the program

Under the arrangement made in 1925, the American branch of the World Alliance has a greater degree of autonomy than heretofore and conducts its affairs with greater freedom, while still maintaining the same close relationship with the Church Peace Union. Instead of the Church Peace Union carrying on the various campaigns in America and paying for them through its own budget, its trustees make an annual grant to the work of the Alliance, and the directors of the latter organization find the balance necessary for carrying out the expanded program

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN COUNCIL: The American Council administers a large part of its work through sub-committees, as follows:

- (1) The Committee upon Reduction of Armaments, Frank A. Horne of New York, N. Y., Chairman
- (2) The Youth Committee, Professor Parker T. Moon, Columbia University, New York, N. Y.
- (3) The Committee on Religious Rights and Minorities, Dr. Arthur J. Brown of New York, N. Y., Chairman
- (4) The Committee on Relationships with Canada, Dr. John W. Langdale, Chairman.

LAMBETH CONFERENCE

OFFICERS: Pres., the Most Rev. the Archbishop of Canterbury; Sec., Bishop of Chichester.

PURPOSE: From its inception the Conference of Bishops at Lambeth has had for its supreme purpose world-wide fellowship. The conference has met seven times—in 1867, 1878, 1888, 1897, 1908, 1920 and 1930

The discussions and reports treat of a wide range of subjects, with varying emphasis. Social, industrial and educational problems have places in most of the programs. Administrative questions, as these pertain both to the conduct of missionary work and to the internal affairs of the Church, receive their due measure of attention. The mind of the conference has been given for the most part to international relations and to organic Christian unity.

INTERNATIONAL MISSIONARY COUNCIL

OFFICERS: Chmn., John R. Mott, 280 Park Ave., New York, N. Y.; Secs., J. H. Oldham, William Paton, Edinburgh House, 2 Eaton Gate, London, S. W. 1, England, and A. L. Warnshuis, 419 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.; Asst. Secs., Miss B. D. Gibson, Miss Esther Strong.

The Council is constituted by the national missionary organizations and Christian councils in the different countries, and is composed, at present, of the following organizations:

National Missionary Council of Australia
Société Belge de Missions Protestantes au Congo
National Christian Council of China
Conseil Protestant du Congo
Dansk Missionsraad
Deutscher Evangelischer Missionsbund
Société des Missions Evangéliques de Paris
Conference of Missionary Societies in Great Britain and Ireland
National Christian Council of India, Burma, and Ceylon
National Christian Council of Japan
Korean National Christian Council
Committee on Cooperation in Latin America
Near East Christian Council
Nederlandsche Zendingraad
Netherlands India
National Missionary Council of New Zealand
Norsk Missionsraad
Foreign Missions Conference of North America (United States and Canada)
National Christian Council of the Philippine Islands
National Christian Council of Siam
Missionary Societies of South Africa
Suomen Lahetysneuvosto
Svenska Missionsrådet
Association of Missionary Societies in Switzerland
Other countries in which National Christian Councils or conferences are not yet organized are represented in meetings of the Council by co-opted delegates.

FUNCTIONS: The functions of the Council shall be the following:

1. To stimulate thinking and investigation on questions related to the missions and expansion of Christianity in all the world, to enlist in the solution of these questions the best knowledge and experience to be found in all countries, and to make the results available for all who share in the missionary work of the churches.
2. To help to coordinate the activities of the national missionary organizations and Christian councils of the different countries, and to bring about united action where necessary in missionary matters
3. Through common consultation to help to unite Christian public opinion in support of freedom of conscience and religion and of missionary liberty
4. To help to unite the Christian forces of the world in seeking justice in international and interracial relations
5. To be responsible for the publication of the International Review of Missions and such other publications as in the judgment of the Council may contribute to the study of missionary questions.
6. To call a world missionary conference if and when this should be deemed desirable.

INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION

PURPOSE: The aim of the institute is to promote international goodwill by means of educational agencies, especially through the interchange of professors and students. Outstanding educators from abroad are brought into contact with American educators and institutions, and student exchanges are promoted between America and Austria, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy and Switzerland.

CHRISTIAN UNITY LEAGUE

OFFICERS OF THE CONTINUATION COMMITTEE: Chmn., Rev. Peter Ainslie, Ten Hills, Baltimore, Md.; Vice-Chmn., Rev. W. Beatty Jennings, Philadelphia, Pa.; Sec., Rev. J. A. MacCallum, Philadelphia, Pa.

Recognizing that there are many in all denominations who are thinking beyond denominational pronouncements on Christian unity, the Christian Unity League came into existence in 1928 in a nation-wide conference at the First Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, on the basis of the Equality of all Christians before God and Brotherhood among all Christians. With these two principles—Equality and Brotherhood—at the fore, a Pact of Reconciliation was formulated as follows:

"We, Christians of various churches, believing that only in a cooperative and united Christendom can the world be Christianized, deplore a divided Christendom as being opposed to the Spirit of Christ and the needs of the world. We, therefore, desire to express our sympathetic interest in and prayerful attitude toward all conferences, small and large, that are looking toward reconciliation of the divided Church of Christ.

"We acknowledge the equality of all Christians before God and propose to follow this principle, as far as possible, in all our spiritual fellowships. We will strive to bring the laws and practices of our several communions into conformity with this principle, so that no Christian shall be denied membership in any of our churches, nor the privilege of participation in the observance of the Lord's supper, and that no Christian minister shall be denied the freedom of our pulpits by reason of differences in forms of ordination.

"We pledge, irrespective of denominational barriers, to be brethren one to another in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, whose we are and whom we serve."

In 1929 a nation-wide conference was held at St. George's Episcopal Church, New York. Other conferences have been held in Kansas City, Cleveland, and St. Louis. It is a religious approach to Christian unity, calling for open membership, open communion, and open pulpits. It is unofficial, each person signing the Pact for himself and, therefore, is not dependent upon denominational action.

THE COMMUNITY CHURCH WORKERS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The Community Church Workers of the United States of America, organized in 1928, is not to be regarded as either a denomination or an association of churches. It is, as its carefully chosen name implies, an association of community church workers brought together for the purpose of providing a center of fellowship and cooperation among the pastors and other leaders in community churches of the various types. Some of these community churches are independent units unrelated to any denomination. Others are denominational churches which in the local community function as a congregation made up of members of many different denominational backgrounds and aiming to serve the whole community. Other community churches are the result of the federation of congregations of different denominations, the national connection with the denomination being retained, while locally the federated bodies function as a single unit. A biennial convention is held under the auspices of the organization.

A cooperative relationship between the Federal Council of Churches, the Home Missions Council and the Community Church Workers was effected in 1929. This national service agency was incorporated in 1931 under the laws of the State of Illinois. The objects given are:

"To foster Christian unity and promote community fellowship

"To help communities in the United States of America unite local churches into community or united churches.

"To plan community programs, federate local churches, organize new unit churches; survey churches and communities and help them unite.

"To hold conferences, cooperate with churches, councils of churches, and all other agencies the better to serve the spiritual and religious needs of America "To foster and promote fellowship for community religion and the building of community goodwill through education, organization and demonstration.

"To help reduce competition and overlapping of effort in religious organization and activity; to place cooperation above competition in the religious and philanthropic activities of the various communities in the United States

"And to do all things necessary or appropriate to the accomplishment of the foregoing purposes"

Two thousand community, united, union and federated churches are operating interdenominationally in the United States.

The Community Churchman, Park Ridge, Illinois (Orvis F. Jordan, editor), serves as a general organ of interpretation of the community church movement.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE FAITH

OFFICERS: Pres., Rt. Rev. William Quinn; Vice-Pres., Very Rev. Thomas J. Leonard; Sec., Rev. Hubert A. Campo; Board of Directors, Rt. Rev. Joseph F. McGlinchey, Rt. Rev. J. F. Glavin, Rev. Wm. A. Griffin, Rev. J. J. McCreary, Rev. Thomas J. McDonnell.

PURPOSE. An international mission-aid organization of the Catholic Church, with headquarters in Rome and national branches in most countries. It aims to enroll all members of the church as helpers, by their prayers and alms, to the missionary priests, brothers and sisters laboring in pagan and mission lands. The number of these is about 47,000, assisted by some 118,000 native lay auxiliaries. In the United States the society operates for the support of both home and foreign missions. Branch offices, under the care of diocesan directors, are established in nearly all of the 105 dioceses of the United States.

PUBLICATION: Catholic Missions (monthly, circulation 95,000 copies).

THIS tabulation is the result of the latest researches and careful work of Rev. O. M. Norlie and Rev. G. L. Kieffer, editors of the Lutheran World Almanac and Encyclopedia. Through their courteous cooperation the table is made available to the readers of the YEARBOOK. It is believed to be the most authoritative now accessible.

The compilers call attention to the fact that the Protestant membership under "North America" is limited, so far as the United States is concerned, to actual church membership as reported by the various religious bodies. The other figures are based on population reports or on census reports which list persons in accordance with their own returns rather than by the membership lists of the churches.

The United States has not yet found common consent to ask questions in its official census canvass as to the denominational or church connection of its citizens. Continental countries do this as a matter of course.

The total, therefore, under North America credited to "Protestants" is a minimum and considerably below the figure which would be comparable to others in the tabulation. This situation would also materially affect the percentage as given.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP REPORTS FOR 1931

FROM the statistical point of view the reports of membership from thirty-five out of the total number of religious bodies recorded by the Census of 1926 (212) are decisive in the records of any year. In these larger groups, with 100,000 members or more, were reported members, approximately in 1931, 49,573,900, of thirteen years or older. In the other 170 or more reported religious bodies, only 2,208,713 members were to be found. This is a percentage of the total of 4.4 per cent. In other words, the table which is submitted in connection with this analysis comprehends 95.6 per cent of the reported membership of religious bodies in the United States.

A New Basis

The collection of the statistics of membership has been made by G. L. Kieffer as statistical editor of the Christian Herald, and submitted in the June issue, 1932. The task of collection and collation is very difficult and quite unsatisfactory. The definition of membership differs widely, and in many respects the figures submitted are only approximately comparable. In the case of the many small bodies the accuracy of the reports when checked with the authoritative Census compilations of 1926 raises difficult questions. An association has been recently formed of the statisticians of the various religious bodies, of which Dr. Kieffer is the president. See page 239. This organization may be able to bring a better understanding of statistical accuracy and comparability into the puzzling field of church statistics. A beginning was made at the last meeting by setting up a division of membership in the Christian Herald tables, first the membership as reported and as desired by each religious body; and second, members thirteen years old and over as determined by the age percentages worked out in the official Census tables of 1926.

Inasmuch as many bodies report large numbers of children as communicant members and others do not, this seemed to the statisticians to be a step forward in providing more comparable figures. These latter figures are the ones used in the tabulation as indicated.

The Increase for 1931

The headlines in the Christian Herald summary reported an increase for 1931 of 433,656 over 1930. Careful checking of the tables revealed that the diligence of the compiler had unearthed thirty-four groups not represented in the tables of 1930. In these groups 111,949 persons were reported for the first time, and this number should be deducted from the increase for the year. The net increase, there-

FIGURE 1. This figure represents an approximation only of the proportion of population in active relationship with the churches of all kinds in the United States. In the so-called "Unchurched" are millions of children. There are also millions who are not in active relations because of occupation, migrancy, delinquency, geography, mental or moral condition. Included in "the unchurched" are millions of lapsed members whose names, because of non-participation, removal, or disappearance, have been removed from the active church lists which are reported on by most of the religious bodies.

fore, is 329,689. This is a percentage of increase of 0.7 in the year. There are still too many unreported groups whose previous records are not available to make this increase overly significant. It is encouraging when compared with the very slight gain reported for 1930.

THE FINANCES OF THE CHURCHES

ON THE next page a table covering the receipts for the years as noted, and for the larger denominations, is presented as the beginning of what it is hoped will be a regular service to the churches, especially to those affiliated in the cooperative work of the Federal Council. These figures have been collected annually by the Secretary of the United Stewardship Council, Harry S. Myers, D.D., and distributed to the members of the Council.

It has seemed wise to make them available in this YEARBOOK OF AMERICAN CHURCHES for preservation, and for comparison from year to year. To this suggestion for this year, Dr. Myers has been most agreeable and this table is offered so far as it is completed.

Two denominations listed have not as yet perfected or submitted their figures. The others are reported with the significant addition of the period covered by their reporting. Membership is included so that comparisons of per capita giving may be made if desired.

It will be noted that most of the periods end with December, 1931, and with March or April, 1932. The depression year of 1931 therefore is on the whole the one recorded by the totals. In order to meet the question which doubtless arises as to the relation of 1931 to 1930 (both years being approximate), another table is submitted below giving the percentage as well as the amount of retraction in total giving as reported. It will be noted that this percentage does not extend very far into 1932.

A STUDY OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

TOO little attention has been paid in the past to the records of church membership in the United States. In most other countries church membership is inclusive, in many places being almost synonymous with population. In the United States it has in general been exclusive, representing a discipline which has been enforced from one point of view or another so that through its records the rise and fall of spiritual interest may be adumbrated. Some religious bodies have kept continuous and usable records which lend themselves with comparatively little editing to measurements. Others have had careless or untrained statisticians or clerks, and their figures present many puzzles and obvious shortcomings. Very few libraries have provided for reasonably complete collections of the records of the many religious bodies in the United States, and comparatively little editorial effort has been expended on the collation and digest of the material that is available. The student who wishes to make a statistical approach to any interdenominational problem will find his way impeded by the difficulty of easy access to figures of any reliability and also by the unmarked peculiarities and hidden dangers of unedited records.

At the urgent request of the General Secretary of the Federal Council the Editor presents a study of the best available statistics of twelve denominations for the very brief period of ten years, a decade, beginning with 1922. This study is meant to suggest the value of more extensive research into the statistics of the churches. The one aspect of denominational activities, the winning of new members, is presented. Table A shows the reported total membership of the twelve bodies from year to year for a decade. Table B shows the number of new members received during each year according to the accepted method of each body, by baptism, or by confirmation or on profession of faith or into or from preparatory membership. Table C shows the relationship between total membership and that part of it which is new in the form of a percentage which is called the "evangelistic index." An index of five per cent means that five per cent of the total membership as reported for the year is brand-new, by whatever initiatory rite is in force.

The figures are taken, for the Presbyterian, U. S. A., Reformed in the U. S., Congregational and Protestant Episcopal Churches from a mss. collection, edited to include only continental U. S. A. reports; for the Presbyterian, U. S., Reformed in America and United Presbyterian Churches, from their Assembly or Synod Minutes; for the Southern Baptists from the 1932 Handbook, page 134; for the Northern Baptists, from the Annals of the Northern Baptist Convention; for the United Lutherans, from the 1933 Year Book, page 41; and for the Methodist Episcopal Church, from the 1932 Year Book, pages 304-305 (instead of "Received from Preparatory Roll, etc.," for 1922-1924 the category "Probationers enrolled during the year" has been employed).

A brief inspection of the tabulations will reveal the interesting fact that these twelve denominations added seven and a half million people to their membership during the decade without counting those who came by letter of transfer or in other ways. This was not net increase but represents those who were enrolled as brand-new members.

The table also shows the number added to each body for the decade and also the total number for each year for all twelve bodies. The productivity for the group has averaged a little over three-quarters of a million persons per year. It would be possible to figure out the net increases for each year and contrast this very variable quantity with the number received on profession, etc., and provide some material for deduction as to the losses which the various bodies lament.

We present one study in graph form to illustrate the possibilities of this type of research. It must not be pressed too far in its implications but is suggestive of what can be done with figures if they are available and reliable. In Figure 2 we have charted the evangelistic index of twelve denominations, a group of sixteen million church people in supposedly active relationship with their churches. The line covers one decade, the important first after-war period. Its high point (5.7) is in 1922 and its low point comes in the boom year of 1929. The lowest point seems to have been passed and the line is now on an upward trend.

In another place* the writer has discussed the possibility of a cycle movement in the productivity of the churches in membership, and it appears to be supported by the line for the decade under discussion. The new cycle has begun and is awaiting the organization and the inspiration of the Church for its thorough exploitation in spiritual effects.

The resemblance which the evangelistic line bears to a business line suggested an attempt to find some means of comparison of the "business line" of the churches to the business line of the market-place. The attempt is recorded on the chart in the dotted line. The Cleveland Trust Company chart, based on the Federal Reserve (Thomas) index of industrial production, for the period 1919 to date, was used. The annual per cent of increase or decrease of business was applied to the normal of church evangelistic productivity (4.87 per cent) and the line charted, comparable with the business line in production.

* Evangelism. A Graphic Survey, Weber (Macmillan).

FIGURE 2. This graph charts a decade, 1922-1931, of the proportion of new members on confession, by baptism or confirmation in the total membership of twelve major bodies. The dotted line represents an application of the percentage above or below normal as used in the Cleveland Trust Company chart to the church normal.

The first glance at the two lines reveals that they are in inverse ratio, with one exception (1925). When the evangelistic index is up the business line is down. This becomes very striking when the legends of the Cleveland Trust Company's chart are attached. The "boom" year, 1923, was a "down" year in productivity for the churches. The "set-back" came for business but the church-line went up. The "Coolidge Prosperity" period, ending in the bull market of 1929, showed steady decline in the church-line. And the depression in business started the church-line up again.

A period of ten years is too short a time to consider as decisive about the relation of business and the Church. It is worth while, however, to formulate a generalization and expose it to further research and thought. The generalization might be this, "Good business is bad-business for the Church." If this generalization seems to be too abrupt, it might be more acceptable to raise the question whether the "good business" of the prosperity period was really good or whether it was based on such unethical or selfish or greedy conceptions that it produced spiritual deflation in the churches. Perhaps the most that we can venture to say with the data we have before us is that there is some connection between business and the churches in their spiritual functioning and it behooves us to endeavor to find out what the connection is.

The data for each denomination are provided in detail so that further and more specific studies may be inaugurated and the implications of the chart discussed from many angles. The level of evangelistic productivity for each denomination, as suggested by the average evangelistic index for each for the decade, deserves very careful appraisal. It should not be explained away—the natural reaction of a certain type of ecclesiastical mind—but explained into new programs or new zeal with knowledge.

THE SENTIMENT FOR CHURCH UNION

IN THE spring and summer of 1932, Dr. H. Paul Douglass of the Institute of Social and Religious Research developed a plan for obtaining ballots from a great variety of people as to their feelings about a union of churches. Three suggestions were presented for choosing. One was the continuance of the present system of denominational separations; the second, a federal union among the denominations; the third, a union of the various bodies into one church.

The first collection of ballots totaled 7,293 and resulted in the following presentation of opinions by denominations. Three denominations were, by a majority of votes cast, against any form of union.

Ballots	Religious Body	Pct. for Continuance Present Order	Pct. for Fed. Union	Pct. for Gen. Union	Total for Union
241	Lutherans	58.9	23.2	14.2	37.4
415	Southern Presbyterians	53.3	25.3	19.3	44.6
174	Southern Baptists	51.1	25.4	21.8	47.2

All other denominations recorded were in favor of some kind of union by a majority of votes. Opinions were sharply divided as between federal union and a union which would be closer and more complete. Those favoring federal union were:

Ballots	Religious Body	Percentage for
		Fed. Union	Gen. Union	Total for Union	Present Order
121	Evangelicals	54.5	19.0	73.5	24.8
179	Reformed	40.8	25.7	66.5	27.9
873	Congregational-Christian	40.1	30.6	70.7	21.9
192	Friends	37.0	24.0	61.0	38.5
139	United Brethren	35.3	30.2	65.5	30.2
756	Presbyterian, U. S. A.	34.9	34.1	69.0	19.7
306	Baptist (North. Conv.)	33.0	22.2	55.2	41.8

The rest of the denominations, voting by majorities for union of some sort, were inclined by scant or in one case by decided majorities to favor real union. They were as follows:

Ballots	Religious Body	Percentage for
		Gen. Union	Fed. Union	Total for Union	Continuance Pres. Separation
326	Disciples	64.5	17.5	82.0	13.5
737	Misc. Smaller Denoms.	39.5	27.7	67.2	27.2
1673	Methodist Episcopal	35.6	34.7	70.3	18.8
372	Methodist Epis. South	34.1	32.8	66.9	30.6
100	Methodist Protestant	34.0	28.0	62.0	34.0
154	Unitarian	28.6	27.9	56.5	38.3
485	Protestant Episcopal	27.6	27.3	54.9	41.6

Of the total ballots collected, 64.7 per cent favored union and 28.8 were for the present order (about 7 per cent were mixed ballots). Of the ballots favoring union, 50.07 per cent were for federal and 49.92 for closer union, a difference of fifteen-hundredths of one per cent!

Since the above was scheduled, about as many more ballots have been collected. Only the total percentages are available as yet. The total number of ballots counted is now 13,164, of which 63.6 per cent favor some sort of union and 32.2 per cent prefer a continuance of the present order. Of the ballots favoring union, 50.68 per cent now favor closer, while 49.37 per cent prefer federal union. So in the doubling of the cross-section of thought on this subject the narrow margin has shifted to closer union. It may be that some of the denominational groups will have shifted also when the ballots are analyzed.

The multiplicity of denominations (212 in the Federal Census check lists) is in part misleading as to the separation in American Protestantism. A very few unions of bodies now separated through regional considerations would concentrate great masses of members into a few outstanding bodies. This may be visually checked by an examination of Figure 3, in which the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions are compared with all other white Baptist bodies, the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with all others of Methodist name, except the Negro group; and the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and the Presbyterian Church, U. S. (So.), with all other Presbyterian groups.

Some of the institutionalized traditions which have been transplanted to American soil from ancient cul-

This chart shows to scale the relationship between the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions and all other white Baptist bodies; between the Methodist Church and the Methodist Church, South, and other smaller Methodist bodies; between the Presbyterian Church, U. tures in Europe ought probably to be always exempted from pressure toward amalgamation with other bodies. As they still bear witness to great movements of the past, they probably serve a highly desirable purpose. The time, however, seems ripe for an appraisal of the relationships of religious bodies so that the adjustment of religious forces to national and social needs may be more sensitive and freer.

At the last meeting of the Federal Council Bishop McConnell touched upon what seems to be the reasonable direction in which studies like the one conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research might urge the churches. He said, "You can't get union among the churches simply by passing a resolution about it. You have to think together; you have to live together in terms of Christian fellowship and then, the first thing you know, union is simply the ratification of a condition that already exists. You are there before you realize what has happened. We are estopped in the Federal Council from any direct planning for formal organic union, but the distinct understanding from the beginning has been that we are to do all we can to create the conditions out of which union might conceivably come."

THE REPORTED RELIGIOUS AFFILIATIONS OF THE VARIOUS CLASSES OF LEADERS LISTED IN Who's Who, 1930-31 EDITION

C. LUTHER FRY
Institute of Social and Religious Research

AN ANALYSIS of all the names listed in the 1930-31 edition of Who's Who in America indicates that a man's profession and his profession of religious faith are intimately connected. Out of the 1,738 actors, artists, sculptors, etc., in the volume only 396 or 23 per cent report a religious connection. Among the 492 army and navy officers 171 or 35 per cent list a denominational relationship, while among the 1,719 natural scientists the number reporting a religion is 632 or 37 per cent. Forty per cent of the 3,801 editors and authors and 42 per cent of the 641 social scientists give some church affiliation.

All other groups show appre-ciably higher proportions. Approximately 50 per cent of the doctors and physicians and the architects and engineers say they have a church connection, compared with 54 per cent of politicians and diplomats and roughly 60 per cent of agriculturists, judges and lawyers, and businessmen and bankers. Educators and social workers claim respectively 63 and 64 per cent, while religious workers report 100 per cent. It would seem that the leaders with creative or mechanistic occupations tend to have a church connection much less frequently than other occupational groups.

The members of certain denominations excel in particular lines of endeavor. The liberal Congregationalists and Unitarians are especially numerous as natural scientists. For example, 7.5 per cent of the Unitarians in Who's Who class themselves as scientists, contrasted with 1.4 per cent of the Roman Catholics and none of the Reformed group. On the other hand only 7.7 per cent of the Unitarians are religious workers, compared with 39.2 per cent of the Reformed group. The Presbyterians appear to be unusually versatile, as they have about the average representation in all occupational classes with the exception of actors and artists.

These and many additional comparisons are brought out in the accompanying table.

HERMAN C. WEBER, Editor
Yearbook of American Churches

IN ADDITION to the very interesting compilations presented by Dr. Fry on the previous pages, a study made of the names in the 1932-1933 edition of Who's Who as soon as it appeared presents some suggestive material to those who like measurements and comparisons. The editor began his investigation originally to discover whether the intelligentsia of the land were enrolled in the churches to a greater degree than ordinary folks. His examination covered a total of 29,763 names. Of this total, 17,552 persons reported some denominational connection or answered the question as to "religion."

The total, 17,552, with religious connection represents a minimum, however. President Hoover neglected to report (or somebody else neglected for him) that he was a Quaker. Both Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., said nothing about their Baptist interests. Doubtless many other biographies were so full of particulars of other sorts that omission of "religion" was deemed a simplification. Notices compiled from official gazettes might also be expected to minimize or omit this item.

The percentage of those recording connections with organized religion, using these words in their broadest sense, was 58.9. The equivalent figure for the population at large, excluding those up to thirteen years of age, is 54. The intelligentsia, then, at their minimum, report a better tie-up than ordinary folks.

But there is another significant trend which is brought out by a comparison of the editor's figures with those of the previous period covered by Dr. Fry's research. He reports that 12,994 made no report of religion or denomination in the volume for 1930-31. The 1932-33 figure is 12,211, a decrease of 783. As compared with the percentage of denominational designation of this year (58.9), the record studied by Dr. Fry presents a percentage of 55.7. There has been an advance of 3.2 per cent.

TABLE OF INCREASES BETWEEN EDITIONS
1930-1931 AND 1932-1933

Religious Body	1930-31	1932-33	Increase
Roman Catholic	740	957	217
Methodists	2,411	2,511	100
Episcopalians	3,648	3,742	94
Jews	218	310	92
Disciples	341	416	75
Presbyterians	3,377	3,440	63
Congregationalists	1,877	1,939	62
Baptists	1,492	1,543	51
Lutherans	400	425	25
Unitarians	848	861	13

It is interesting to note that the Roman Catholics and the Jews whose percentage of appearance or at least of designation in the Who's Who lists is below the average, have made very substantial advances during the short interval between editions.

In the table below the denominations are listed in the order of the number of designations with which they are credited in the 1932-1933 volume.

Episcopalians and Presbyterians are the topnotchers. Is there something about Episcopalianism or Presbyterianism that makes for eminence or achievement, or is there something about eminence or achievement that suggests a conformity to the most respectable (sic!) traditions or the class stratification to which Dr. Richard Niebuhr pays his respects in his volume, Social Sources of Denominationalism? Episcopalians have eight times their share of Who's Who notables in proportion to their numbers, and Presbyterians have four times.

Running down the table, we find some other suggestions. Unitarians have forty times their proportionate number, Congregationalists six times, and Universalists eight times. Does this excess, registered as it is by the New England groups, indicate a high sense of public service and social zeal? The Quakers register a share six times that suggested by their numerical strength.

TABLE OF NOTABLES

Religious Body	Proportionate Share	Actual Number Listed
Episcopalians	489	3,742
Presbyterians	860	3,440
Methodists	2,281	2,511
Congregationalists	316	1,939
Baptists	1,790	1,543

Religious Body	Proportionate Share	Actual Number Listed
Unitarians	20	861
Roman Catholics	5,090	957
Lutherans	965	425
Disciples	491	416
Jews	1,439	310
Quakers	81	194
Reformed	176	169
Universalists	16	182
Christian Scientists	70	117
All Others	3,568	796
Total Listed	17,552	17,552

A number of distinguished persons are a trifle vague about their religious affiliations. Some of them put themselves down as "Protestants" or as "Christians." Of the former there were 277. Of the latter it is hard to tell whether they are using a denominational name (an alternative for "Disciples" or some other recognized denominational connection) or a general category.

The list includes 73 Mormons, 11 Theosophists and only 1 Spiritualist. There are 7 Freethinkers, 8 Agnostics, 1 Infidel, 3 Rationalists and 2 Atheists, not a very extensive confessed group of the extreme left. There are also 3 Rosicrucians, 1 Fundamentalist, 1 Social Pragmatist, 1 Humanist and 3 Pillars of Fire.

The alphabet gains some luster from this compilation, the leading letter being "M" which has 1,713 religionists, followed closely by "S" with 1,708. The "Macs" and "Mcs" from Scotland and Ireland assure a church complexion to "M," and it is interesting to find the Presbyterians forging ahead of the Episcopalians in this section. They even show more than twice as many as the Catholics though, when the O' section is reached, the latter lead all the rest.

The Smith family numbers 277 distinguished persons, of whom 167 tell how they are connected ecclesiastically. Not one of them disavows religious interest, though 110 are silent. Presbyterians lead with 36; Episcopalians, Congregationalists and Methodists follow with 31, 28 and 27, respectively. Of the Smith tribe 68 are educators, 34 clergymen, 23 lawyers, 19 doctors or medical men, and 15 writers or authors. Only 9 are manufacturers, of whom perhaps one might qualify as a smith.

The tables submitted by Dr. Fry will repay close study. His investigation has been much more detailed than is disclosed by his brief article, and it is hoped that there will be early publication of its findings. His willingness to provide a special set of tables will be appreciated by the constituency of the YEARBOOK.

SECTION VIII
DOCUMENTATION

SOCIAL IDEALS OF THE CHURCHES

Adopted at Indianapolis, December 7, 1932

1. Practical application of the Christian principle of social well-being to the acquisition and use of wealth; subordination of speculation and the profit motive to the creative and cooperative spirit.

2. Social planning and control of the credit and monetary systems and the economic processes for the common good.

3. The right of all to the opportunity for self-maintenance; a wider and fairer distribution of wealth; a living wage, as a minimum, and above this a just share for the worker in the product of industry and agriculture.

4. Safeguarding of all workers, urban and rural, against harmful conditions of labor and occupational injury and disease.

5. Social insurance against sickness, accident, want in old age and unemployment.

6. Reduction of hours of labor as the general productivity of industry increases; release from employment at least one day in seven, with a shorter working week in prospect.

7. Such special regulation of the conditions of work of women as shall safeguard their welfare and that of the family and the community.

8. The right of employes and employers alike to organize for collective bargaining and social action; protection of both in the exercise of this right; the obligation of both to work for the public good; encouragement of cooperatives and other organizations among farmers and other groups.

9. Abolition of child labor; adequate provision for the protection, education, spiritual nurture and wholesome recreation of every child.

10. Protection of the family by the single standard of purity; educational preparation for marriage, home-making and parenthood.

11. Economic justice for the farmer in legislation, financing of agriculture, transportation and the price of farm products as compared with the cost of machinery and other commodities which he must buy.

12. Extension of the primary cultural opportunities and social services now enjoyed by urban populations to the farm family.

13. Protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of any traffic in intoxicants and habit-forming drugs.

14. Application of the Christian principle of redemption to the treatment of offenders; reform of penal and correctional methods and institutions, and of criminal court procedure.

15. Justice, opportunity and equal rights for all; mutual goodwill and cooperation among racial, economic and religious groups.

16. Repudiation of war, drastic reduction of armaments, participation in international agencies for the peaceable settlement of all controversies; the building of a cooperative world order.

17. Recognition and maintenance of the rights and responsibilities of free speech, free assembly, and a free press; the encouragement of free communication of mind with mind as essential to the discovery of truth.

18. Gambling on the results of games and other incidents has brought unchristian and anti-social motives into the ascendancy and tends to establish false standards of life, the individual seeking to be relieved of responsibility, arduous tasks or creative work. This attitude culminates in a supreme endeavor to acquire wealth through and by speculation, with no personal contribution to society. Gambling permeates all society, breeds criminals, is directly responsible for broken fortunes, broken homes, defalcations and suicides. This mania for gambling has come to a climax in a debauch of stock speculation. This is not only non-creative, but it is destructive, relocating and redistributing wealth with no regard whatever for the genius and energy that created it.

SECTION IX

WHO'S WHO IN THE CHURCHES

NOTE: This section represents only the beginning of what is expected to be expanded in future editions until it becomes a complete list of American religious leaders. In its present form, the list is primarily Protestant, although some information about Catholic and Jewish leaders has been included. Emphasis has been placed upon giving information about individuals holding official positions in national organizations.

What the AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY means

TO THE MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE:

"Pass it On"

Often prepares the way for the missionary by the distribution of the Scriptures prior to his arrival. Makes the Scriptures available for the missionary's use in his work of evangelization. Gives constant attention to translating the Good News into additional languages and dialects. Aids and supplements all home mission agencies by distributing the Scriptures throughout America both to the alien and the native born. Send for booklet, "The What, Where, and Why of the American Bible Society."

TO THE LOCAL CHURCH:

Promotes Universal Bible Sunday annually, thereby calling the attention of church-going people to the importance of the Bible. Provides the Scriptures in every form required by a congregation. Prepares material for young people's organizations and furnishes Sunday Schools and church groups with leaflets on the Bible.

TO THE PASTOR:

Publishes Hebrew and Greek Scriptures for study use. Provides stereopticon lectures on Bible Work. Issues helpful material for use on Universal Bible Sunday. Publishes the Scriptures in forms for unusual parish needs. Furnishes posters and leaflets for lectures and addresses. Send for booklet, "The American Bible Society and the Pastor."

TO THE BLIND:

Publishes embossed Scriptures in Braille and other systems for the blind and in large print for persons with failing eyesight. Send for booklet, "Scriptures for the Blind."

TO THE DONOR:

Conducts a safe and satisfactory annuity plan paying from 4% to 9% to persons interested in giving but requiring some return from their money during their lifetime. Send for booklet, "A Gift That Lives."

AMERICAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION

Organized under its present name in 1824

As the oldest and largest Sunday School organization serving the otherwise unreached of rural America, the American Sunday-School Union provides through the establishment of Union Sunday Schools, and the distribution of literature, thousands of communities with their only opportunity for spiritual development.

The Charter of the Society clearly indicates its field of labor, in the following words:

1. "To establish and maintain Sunday Schools, and
2. To publish and circulate moral and religious publications."

At the present time approximately one hundred and sixty full time Missionaries are organizing and supervising Union Sunday Schools, conducting revival and prayer meetings, providing leadership for Daily Vacation Bible Schools, ministering to the needy, sick and shut-in, and distributing the Holy Bible and Sunday School lesson helps, in communities where there is no other organized Christian work.

A complete line of lesson helps based on the Uniform Lessons is published, especially prepared to meet rural conditions. Catalog of our publications and Sunday School supplies will gladly be sent upon request.

The American Sunday-School Union is dependent upon the free will gifts of those interested in this work, and the receipt of legacies.

Our Annuity Agreements provide the beneficiary with an income certain and generous during their lifetime, and offer Christians an opportunity to support the work of our Society. Send for our booklet—"An Investment in Christianizing Rural America."

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY

Organized 1825

The century-old and approved agency of the churches for the publication and distribution of Christian Literature.

THE PAST YEAR

The Society distributed 4,647,291 pieces of Christian literature in about fifty languages; gratuitously circulated $40,585.07 worth of literature for missionary purposes just where the need was greatest, published ten foreign-language church hymnals used by the various denominations, maintained an efficient and increasing force of colporteurs, and rendered the churches other indispensable services. We are here to serve Christ and His Church, and want to aid you.

WILL YOU HELP

By a personal donation, by a contribution from your church, by a bequest in your will, or by the purchase of annuity bonds?

ANNUITIES UP TO 9%

A guaranteed life income, a safe and sound investment, a gift wisely bestowed.

A semi-annual income for life, safeguarded against anxiety, shrinkage, or other losses. A gift to the work of a great and debt-free Christian organization more needed today than ever before to counteract the organized assaults on the Christian faith.

Send for the Annuity booklet and for the tract and book catalogs.

The RIGHT BOOKS are FRIENDS

HOW often have you regretted overlooking, for a time, books which lent genuine joy, inspiration and help, when you discovered them? How often, too, have you begrudged the time and money wasted on books whose promise went unfulfilled?

The purpose of the Religious Book Club is to help you find at once the living books and to help you avoid books of less consequence, thus saving your time and money. The Club is six years old.

The counsel of the five outstanding religious leaders on the Editorial Committee is made available to members of the Religious Book Club through the monthly Bulletin, which is free.

Membership costs nothing. There are no dues or fees. Members, upon joining, are asked to take at least six books a year. But now you may test Religious Book Club service without obligating yourself until you are satisfied that it is good. Enroll on a trial basis and you receive a good book free.

You may resign and stop service immediately merely by returning the free book within 30 days. If you keep the free book, thus indicating your satisfaction, you will be regularly enrolled for one year.

Write for a sample copy of the Religious Book Club Bulletin. Test this service now.
